Ports of Madagascar Blockaded.

France Did it, England Objects.

Both Countries Exhibit Hostile Feelings.

Ministers of the Cabinet Summoned

And Armies Assuming a War Footing.

The Situation Extremely Warlike in Its Aspects.

English and Indian Troops Ordered to Concentrate at Convenient Points and Await Orders.

ANATARIVO, Madagascar, Oct. 1.—A blockade of the ports of the island of Madagascar has been proclaimed by France. The resident general has gone to Tamatave. He has been instructed to take measures to protect the colonists in the event of war.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—All the afternoon papers gravely discuss the hasty summoning of a cabinet council, is it generally accepted as being connected with some serious difficulty with France.

The liberal organ, the Westminster Gazette, handles the subject very tenderly and is evidently anxious not to excite public opinion, and thereby embarass the government. On the other hand the conservative mouthpieces discuss the matter more fearlessly and warn France against encroaching upon British rights. The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"A crisis which necessitates the convening of a cabinet council must be very sudden, as the ministers were disposed on their holidays. It is quite possible, however, that propositions have been made to settle the various differences. But, while we gladly recognize the incident admits of favorable interpretation, it is idle to ignore the fact that it is quite possible that the cabinet has been summoned to discuss a new and unexpected cause of friction with France."

The Pall Mall Gazette then refers to the article printed today in the Politique Coloniale, of Paris, which reflects the views of the minister of the colonies, M. Delcasse, and which gives, exclusive of the questions of Egypt and Madagascar, a list of eleven outstanding difficulties between France and England connected with frontiers and similar disputes in various African colonies. The Politique Coloniale, however, says that many of these have practically been settled and that none of them would justify a rupture unless one country was bent upon picking a quarrel with the other, which, the paper adds, is not the case.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in spite of this, says that the article in the Politique Colonaile is unfriendly to the "verge of discourtesy," adding: "And if it reflects the spirit in which the French ministers intend to discuss the difficulties with England, we may prepare for troublesome times. We do not wish to quarrel with France, but, on the other hand we are indisposed to permit trespassing upon our unquestioned rights. The bullying spirit which tells Frenchmen that they have only to brag and bluff enough to force England to surrender may easily lead to trouble."

The Pall Mall Gazette then continues: "The Daily Chronicle says that war between France and England must be regarded as inconceivable madness. It may be madness, but it is not inconceivable. France must be told courteously, but firmly, that we have not the slightest desire to attack or to provoke her, but that, if attacked, we shall defend ourselves to the last extremity."

The Globe also expresses the belief that the hurried calling of the cabinet council is due to disputes with France, adding: "We believe that there is no ground for public alarm or suspicion. But we cannot surrender any part of England's rights or shirk any part of her duties. Our strained relations with France are not a matter of a day's growth—not connected entirely with Madagascar. We have points of contact with the French throughout the world and each is positive of having fostered irritation which may easily become strife. It is certain that the lame way in which we have allowed ourselves to be outwitted in the far east during the last year, and the manner in which we have stood by while France partitioned our heritage in Siam has done much to persuade the more ignorant or hot headed Frenchmen that England is not so terrible after all."

"Today's news of the blockade of the Island of Madagascar sets at rest all doubts as to the immediate business of tomorrow's cabinet council. The ministers have decided upon a resolute course of action and the public will await with anxiety the news of their decision. We want no panic and war fevers, but we need the assurance that our interests will be properly safeguarded and our allies protected. The French will find that we shall have a word to say about the Madagascar question before it is settled, and Lord Roseberry may rely upon the unionists to support him loyally and heartily in the interests of the empire."

The above quotations from the leading afternoon papers of this city give a fair idea of the draft of public opinion here and the gravity of the crisis which has caused the calling of a cabinet council for tomorrow.

The Cause of It.

The dispute between England and France in regard to Madagascar is one of long standing. Madagascar is a large island, separated from the southeastern portion of Africa by the Mozambique channel. It is now really under a French protectorate, although it is claimed in England that at least one-seventh of the island is held by British capital. The French embassy in London shortly answered a communication from the Madagascar consul in London by a formal statement that officially there is no longer such a person as a London Madagascar consul, as, it was added, the agents of France in various countries represent the Hovas government. Early last month the French government evidently determined upon taking decided action in, regard to Madagascar, probably believing that the hands of England were tied by the complications brought about through the war between China and Japan. Consequently, M Le Myre de Villers was sent on a special mission to Madagascar and it was understood he was to all intents and purposes instructed to demand the abdication of the government and to annex the island to France. The following statement was made regarding the mission of M. Le Myre de Villers, recently: "He will first demand a reversion of the treaty of 1885 and will then ask that the treaty of France at Diego Suarez be extended to Passandame bay, on the western side of Madagascar, and to Vohemar bay, on the east side of the island, and that Majunga and Nossi Beh, of the west coast, and Fort Dauphin, Tamatave, Manaboudero and Andoveran, on the eastern shores, with their adjacent territories, be ceded to France. Finally, he was instructed to demand that the French resident shall have the right to control all the actions of the government of Madagascar, including its foreign policy."

The Cocarde of Paris, at the time of the departure of M. LeMyre De Villers, who is just about due at Madagascar, said: "He will call upon the Hova government to satisfy all our demands, and to respect all the clauses of our treaties. In the case of the Hova government accepting this demand, a proctoral summarizing our rights and rendering some obscure points clear, will be drawn up. These rights may be summarized as follows: "The installation of a French representative, who will treat exclusively all questions of foreign policy with the powers; the recognition of the right of Europeans to possess property without any retrocession clause; the right of treating with the natives for the hire and farming of property; the registration of all deeds concerning the purchase and hire of property at the French residency; the construction of a railway which the Malagasey government has till now refused; the freedom of navigation of the rivers; the establishment of military stations where the French may think fit; the appointment of a French agent to control and secure the financial resources wasted at the present moment to the detriment of the natives; the installation of a French resident with each of the Malagassey governors, with the object of securing the respect of treaties and the proper collection of the taxes—in a word, the effectual application of the protectorate regime which has, until now, been nothing but nominal If the Hova ministers do not give entire satisfaction M. DeVillers will withdraw to one of the vessels of our squadron, and the commander of that squadron will then open the sealed instructions sent to him."

PARIS, Oct 3.—The Matin this morning says that Madagascar can offer no possible subject for a dispute between France and Great Britain, adding: "Once our differences with the Malagasy government are settled there will be no pretext for a Franco-British conflict. The relations between the two governments were never more tranquil."

BULLETINS.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The Sun learns, it says, that a portion of the British channel fleet will be ordered to reinforce the British Mediteranian squadron.

PARIS, Oct 3.—The minister of foreign affairs, M. Hanotaux, denies that the blockade of the Island of Madagascar has been proclaimed by France.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The officials of the foreign office deny that the summoning of the cabinet tomorrow is due to a hitch in the negotiations with France, in regard to Madagascar, but the necessity of discussing several important international questions, one of the chief subjects to be brought up being the safety of British subjects resident in China. A dispatch was received at the foreign office today, from the British consul at Pekin stating that he was making arrangements to insure the safety of the British residents at the Chinese capital.

HOT SHOT

Hurled by Dr. Parkhurst in New York City

At the Police Justices and the Police Department of the Metropolis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Dr. Parkhurst attracted a large audience to Amity hall last night. He spoke under the auspices of the City Vigilance league. The doctor was evidently suffering from the effects of the severe strain to which he is subjected, as he did not speak with his accustomed ease. Before he concluded he improved sufficiently to hurl some hot shots at the police justices and the police department. The audience was informed by Dr. Parkhurst that to witness the examination of Mr. Goff when he fairly had to gimblet the testimony from them was far better than going to a theatre for amusement. He spoke of the unreliability of the word of the policemen, saying that Ex-Commissioner of Police Voorhis put himself on record by asserting that he seldom put any credence in what a policeman testified. "The character of police court's matters touch more closely the future of the municipality," he said, "than even the police." Dr. Parkhurst read from a letter he had received from a prominent man, in which he offers to any young lawyer in the city a fee of $1,000 for the successful impeachment of a police justice. This offer, the writer explained, would be binding on his heirs and he hoped some of the representatives of the bar would take it up.

GENERAL MILES' RECORD.

When His Hardest Fighting Was Really Done.

Col. R. S. Robertson, whose brilliant record as a soldier is well known, and who at one time served under General Miles, contributes the following with reference to that gallant soldier:

Editor SENTINEL:

In an interesting article in your paper Tuesday evening, entitled "Retiring Generals," of General Miles it is said "that his hardest fighting has been done since the war." I think the writer of that sentence can hardly be familiar with Miles' war record, for, splendid as were his Indian campaigns, I think he himself would accord them second place to those in which he participated with the first division of the second corps in the army of the Potomac. Entering the service in 1861 as a lieutenant, he leaped at a bound to the rank of colonel, was brevetted brigadier general, then promoted to full rank, brevetted again major general, and promoted again to that full rank; commanding a brigade as colonel, a division, and, for a time, the second corps; and every promotion was won without political backing, but solely by gallant fighting qualities, in that magnificent division, the one whose record stands highest in the history of the war—the one of which Fox, in his "Regimental Losses," says: "But the hardest fighting and greatest loss of life occurred in the first division of the second corps—Hancock's old division—in which more men were killed and wounded than in any other division in the Union army, east or west. Its losses aggregated 2,287 killed, 11,724 wounded (including the mortally wounded), and 4,833 missing; total, 18,844. * * * Over 14,000 men were killed or wounded in this division during the war; yet, it never mustered 8,000 muskets, and often could muster only half of that. After the charge on Marye's Heights it numbered only 2,800."

At Marye's Heights Miles fell at the head of his regiment, (the Sixty-first Maryland,) with a severe, and as was then supposed, a mortal wound, but recovered to fight many a battle later.

Serving in all the compaigns of that grand fighting division from the Peninsular campaign to the last ditch at Appomattox, it seems curious to be told now "that his hardest fighting has been done since the war.

He possessed that military genius which West Point cannot supply, and perhaps his well-earned fame would not shine so brightly had he passed through that school, instead of graduating on the field of battle. He divides with Logan, how equally or surpassingly history will say, the honors as the beau ideal of the volunteer soldier of America. I know from experience the stuff of which he is made, and will venture the assertion that the command of the armies of the United States has devolved upon no worthier or more competent officer than the "voluteer" who will succeed to that high position if he lives until September next.

DESTRUCTIVE CYCLONE.

Little Rock Almost Wiped Out of Existence.

The State Insane Asylum and Penitentiary Badly Damaged and Some of the Inmates Injured.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark, Oct 3.—A terrible cyclone swept over the business portion of this city at 7:30 o'clock last night, carrying death and destruction in its path.

The first intimation of the impending catastrophe was when the cyclone struck. All lights were extinguished and the dark streets were filled with flying roofs, walls and debris of all kinds. It swept up from the southwest, striking the city near the insane asylum, the male part of which was demolished. Dr. Ingate was killed and several inmates seriously injured.

It then passed on to the penitentiary doing but slight damage at intermediate points. The second and third stories of the shop building were blown off, the cells being unroofed, the shop destroyed and the old building scattered broadcast. A convict was killed and several guards injured. The terrible work continued to the main part of the city and its path was strewn with debris of wrecked buildings, tangled telegraph and telephone wires and fallen trees that had withstood the tempests of many decades.

A number of residences were more or less damaged, roofs blown away and walls partly demolished The next marked damage was when the storm struck the St. Mary's building at the corner of Spring and Second streets. This was a large three-story brick office and apartment house occupied by Larkins, a Methodist minister, and several lawyers' offices. Governor Hisback and General Armstead have rooms in this building, but they escaped injury. The colored porter was seriously injured.

Some of the most substantial brick structures of the district lying along Main and Markham streets, south to Fourth and Fifth, were razed to the ground. The wind was followed by a drenching torepest of rain lasting for nearly an hour and keeping nearly every one within doors, so that the real extent of the damage could not be ascertained at the time. Telephone wires in the business portion were all down and communication by that means was impossible.

The rumor of widespread fatalities caused intense solicitude for business men who were in the city, but who could not be reached by telephone. Street car traffic was entire suspended and the only way to reach their homes was to, walk. The police were on the scene promptly with an increased force and everything was done to restrain the disorderly element from creating a disturbance. The saloons, or those that were not entirely destroyed, were ordered closed at midnight by Chief McMahon. The patrol wagon was pressed in service and many of the injured were taken to hotels where their wounds were attended to.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 3.—The cyclone which did so much damage at Little Rock, passed a few miles north of this city. Reports from the section say considerable damage was done to farm property, wrecking buildings and fences and injuring crops.

ONCE A DANCE GIRL.

Now She is Heiress to an Immense Fortune.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—The death of Frederick Ryan, a capitalist, in the railroad accident near Yonkers, N. Y., a few days ago, has made Mabel Ryan-Edwards heiress to a large fortune. Two years ago Mabel lived with her father, the capitalist, at Pittsburg, Pa. She became stage struck and eloped with Clarence Edwards, a mere boy. Mabel was then only sixteen. The pair went to Chicago, Mabel performing in an "illusion" and "living pictures" at the world's fair. Then they came to California and Mabel worked at the midwinter fair as a hum girl and as the aerial lady who floats through space in an illusion. Edwards managed his wife's finances. She subsequently performed in several dance halls in this city and a few weeks ago left with her husband for Portland, Oregon.

CORBETT WRITES.

He Will Fight a New Man Every Night for a Week Next Year.

BOSTON, Oct. 3.—James J. Corbett issued a statement to the public this evening in which he says that his contracts will prevent him from fighting any one before July 1 next. He says he will immediately post $10,000 with David Blanchard, of Boston, as a guarantee of good faith that he will meet all comers for one week after July 1 next. He declares that he will fight one man every night during the week and then retire permanently from the ring. He concludes by saying that he will fight Fitzsimmons first and after him first come, first served, no weight or color barred.

"CHASTISE CHINA."

That is the War Cry of the Japanese Soldiers.

Only 70,000 Armed Chinese to Defend Pekin Against the Oncoming Japs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3.—Officials of the Japanese legation have received an interesting budget of news and gossip from the last mail from Japan. The spirit of the people is shown in war songs sung by the Japanese troops as they pass toward Pekin The songs were officially compiled by order of Prince Arisugawa They breathe great bitterness against China, and significantly declare that "now is the time to plant the flag of the Rising Sun on the walls of Pekin and to illuminate its darkness." Each verse of the song begins and ends with, "Strike and Chastise China" The various verses describe the Chinese as arrogant and insolent with an "army of cowards." Of the Chinese troops the war song says: "They are an undisciplined rabble, and however fine their arms look, they are useless like fine ladies in pictures." The chant closes with an invocation to "March and fire as long as breath remains."

The Japanese minister of finance has officially made known that the war will not be allowed to interrupt the internal improvements of Japan Consequently, railway construction is to proceed with the same vigor as in peaceful times. The minister has arranged that the treasury shall keep separate accounts of the war expenses and those for internal improvement, in order that the former may not overshadow the latter. The latest customs house reports issued in Japan show that her trade with the United States is greater than that with any other country. The total trade last year was about four million yens. The British trade, which comes second, is three and a half million yens. The Japanese people and press are retorting to the Chinese emperor's proclamation directing that the Japanese "who-jen," meaning pigmies, "should be driven to their lairs" The Chinese are being called "chau chau," the word signifying puerility. "Toupi-Kau," meaning pig-tailed vagabonds, is also used.

China is referred to as "Mei-So-Koku," meaning the country in which people cannot make up their minds. The Japanese theatres are already presenting plays showing the routes of the Chinese on land and sea

SHANGHAI, Oct. 3.—French troops are massing in Tonquin. It is reported that the Japanese have captured Liku Lien Chen, on the eastern side of the Yalu river. One hundred and fifty thousand men have gathered at Pekin for the defense of the city, but of this number only 70,000 are effectively armed. Only 50,000 soldiers are available for the defense of the province of Chi Li Kuan, and these are raw recruits. A Japanese army has landed north of the Yellow river, in the southern part of the gulf of Pe-Chil Li, to intercept the transportation of troops from the south by way of the Grand canal to Tien Tsin. A Japan fleet of seventeen ships is now blockading the gulf of Pe-Chil-Li.

GETTING THE ARMY AND NAVY READY

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The secretary of state for foreign affairs, the Earl of Kimberly, has been in communication with the Indian government and preparations are being made to concentrate English and Indian troops in readiness to proceed further east. It is added that the sanction of the cabinet is necessary before any further steps are possible. A dispatch received here from Portsmouth says that rumors are circulated there in regard to extensive naval preparations. The various heads of departments at the dock yards had a conference this morning, at which the opinion of the officers was taken in regard to the time the first division of the reserve ships could be in readiness to put to sea. The dispatch adds that the training squadron's departure for the West Indies has been postponed from Saturday next to Wednesday a week, and, if necessary, the cruise of this squadron will be abandoned and the men on board training ships will be transferred to ships which will shortly be commissioned.

PLUMAGE OF BIRDS.

Women Petitioned Not to Wear It in Their Hair.

ALBANY, N. Y., Oct. 3.—The legislature will be petitioned to enable cities, by law, to license cats as well as dogs and capture stray ones, and women will be petioned to refrain from wearing the plumage of birds in their hair. That is the principal work of the society for the prevention of cruelty to animals in session here yesterday. The reports presented show that there are now thirty-three anti-cruelty organizations in the state, fourteen for the cure of animals, and thirteen looking to cruelty to children and six humane societies. Cases prosecuted in the courts this year, 980; disabled animals temporarily suspended from work, 3,779, horses disabled past recovery humanely destroyed, 4 796; disabled horses removed from streets in ambulances, 607; complaints investigated, 7 590 A committee on legislation was named.

LOST HIS WIFE,

And With Her His Money and His Property.

A Capitalist's Wife Deserts Him and Elopes With a Street Car Conductor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—Charles Stelling, grocer and capitalist, is out $5,000 in cash, all his deeds to property valued at $90,000 and a pretty wife, who has deserted him for a street car conductor. Bonds, papers and everything pocketable have disappeared from the Stelling residence.

Stelling is eccentric, and one day confided to his wife that he had stored away in a convenient chest a bag of gold for an emergency. This emergency came when Mrs. Stelling decided to elope with Alexander McNeill, a street car conductor.

Besides owning three groceries and a coal yard, Stelling possessed much valuable business and residence property, all of which he placed in his wife's name soon after his marriage. The deeds to the property, with certificates of corporation and mining stock and the bag of gold have gone with the eloping couple. Stelling is at a loss how to recover any of his property.

THE BICYCLE CAR.

A Curious Invention Made by a Fort Wayne Citizen.

John R. Mote, of Lakeside, Who is Something of a Genius, Talks to a Sentinel Scribe.

Fort Wayne can boast a genius who is responsible for a hundred inventions. There are few cities that can make this boast Furthermore, it is likely that half the people of Fort Wayne never saw or heard of this inventor. So much for not keeping one's ears and eyes open

As the sojourner on a suburban car goes east over the Lakeside line he will notice, at the extremity of Columbia avenue, a queer looking building located on the right, by the barn terminal.

The building is a curiosity. It might be an improvised steam boat or built by hands which had once helped to fashion ships. Thereon is a sigh which reads:

I LEARN YOU TO TAKE PICTURES FOR $5.

But photography is not the one thing which distinguishes John R Mote, the owner, designer and builder of this odd structure. He is the man of the hundred inventions and it was to see his latest—the only real, genuine bicycle car—that took a SENTINEL representative to Lakeside last evening. Mr Mote was in his workshop and sociably inclined.

"Yes, I am something of an inventor," said he; "photography is only a side issue. I have spent considerable time on my bicycle car and am now only waiting for a manufacturer to take charge of placing it on the market."

The invention was then taken out and tested before the astonished scribe, who was not expecting so curious a piece of mechanism It consists of three bicycle wheels arranged something after the manner of a tricycle and supporting a light wooden frame or car. The seat is a bicycle saddle placed over the rear and center wheel. This wheel, which once served as the motive power for a Star bicycle, is provided with ratchets and operated as in a bicycle of that pattern. The frame, or car, is built about the two front wheels, and, although in its present state the machine looks rather clumsy, yet if built of light wire its weight ought not to exceed that of an ordinary tricycle, which it strongly resembles. The concern is also arranged so that it can be hitched to a horse or team, and is chiefly designed for road service and is suitable for any one leading an itinerant life.

Mr. Mote, although he has successfully wrestled with 100 new mechanical ideas, met with no little discouragement when he first attempted to operate the car. It insisted on running backwards instead of forwards. For instance Mr Mote planned a trip to Hicksville and mounted his wheel In the twinkling of an eye, almost, he found himself in the suburbs of Columbia City. This slight difficulty was overcome and then the brake got out of gear. In going down a steep hill the redoubtable Mote applied the brake. It would not work. Horrible apprehensions seized him and to stop the machine he shoved his leg through one of the wheels. The thing jumped twenty feet in the air and fell back on Mote with a dull, sickening thud.

He was unhurt, however, and as these pleasant little episodes are the historio portion of a true inventor's life, he did not even grumble. The wheel is all right now and most any fine day Mote can be seen riding his wheel about the streets of Lakeside and looking for other mechanical nuts to crack.

Chapters might be written on Mr. Mote's inventions They range from farm fences to gas lamps and from hickory-nut shellers to patent cow milkers He has grown rich from their sale and owns several fine houses and lots.

The inventor was born in England and has traveled largely in this and foreign lands. He is a self-made man and also something of a poet. A trip to his home will convince the most skeptical In fact

Mr. Mott is hot shot,
And he's invented—what not?

AN OHIO VISITOR.

A Former Resident of This City Visits Historic Points.

J. C. Wallace, esq., wife and sister, Mrs. Dyche, of Springfield, Ohio, are guests of General Secretary J. W. Burns, of the railroad department Y. M. C. A Mr. Wallace, having frequently visited Fort Wayne prior to 1845, when the "Old Fort" was one of the principal attractions, was anxious to see the "old block house" once more, and proceeded to the site, but found no vestige remaining He was pleased, however, with the manner in which the historical spot is being cared for. The cannon captured from the British by Commodore Perry on Lake Erie, and brought here by General Anthony Wayne is now doing the somewhat unique service of hitching post at the residence of ex-Mayor Randall, corner Berry and Lafayette streets, and was shown the gentleman, who, while feasting his eyes upon the old relic, remarked: "This is too valuable a piece of property to belong to any individual or to be used for such a purpose. It should be in the possession of some historical society that would preserve it for the benefit of future generations." He further observed: "The great transformation of the Indian hunting grounds into a city of such importance and magnificent proportions is truly marvelous in my eyes."

CONTESTING A WILL.

Involving Between $25,000 and $30,000 Worth of Property.

The Eldest Daughter Seeks in Court to Break the Will Made by the Late Mrs. August H. Carier.

A big will case, involving property to the amount of $25,000 or $30,000, and one which will develop considerable interest, is set down for hearing before Special Judge John Morris and a jury in the circuit court next Tuesday, and its trial will no doubt occupy all the remainder of the week.

The case is that of Mrs. Juliet Lingfelser against the Misses Clemens Carier and Helen Carier, children of the late August C. Carier and his wife, Clemens M. Carier, and in it the plaintiff will seek to set aside the will made by the latter, Mrs. Carier, by which she gave at death all her property, real and personal, to her two daughters, Clemens and Helen Carier, some of the facts which will be developed at the trial being substantially as follows:

In the spring of 1891 August H. Carier, of this city, died, and within a few months afterward his wife, Mrs. Clemens Carier, also departed this life, holding at the time of her death the title to valuable real estate, on two lots of which the family residence, 178 East Berry street, was situated, and she also became the possessor of considerable estate through the payment of a life insurance policy which Mr. Carier had carried in her name for the sum of $10,000, the whole estate which she left being valued at between $25,000 or $30,000.

Before the death of Mrs. Carier she made a will giving all this insurance money and the valuable real estate of which she was possessed to her two unmarried daughters, Misses Clemens and Helen Carier By this suit her other and eldest daughter, Mrs Juliet Lingfelser, seeks to set aside the will, claiming that in the making of it she did so because of the undue influence exerted over her by the two other daughters, Clemens and Helen Carier.

It seems that the testatrix, Mrs. Carier, who was a lady of advanced years and in feeble health, had become exceedingly nervous, disturbed in mind and overwhelmed with grief by reason of the loss of her husband only a short time before, and that this had so impaired her mental faculties as to render her more easily to be influenced by others, and it is claimed by the plaintiff that the daughter, Clemens, availed herself of the opportunity afforded her, by reason of her association with her mother, in the absence of her sister, Mrs. Lingfelser, and by her representations and charges against said sistor, to prejudice and embitter the mother against the plaintiff, and that she followed this up by causing her mother to exclude Mrs. Lingsfelser from anything more than a mere nominal provision in the will by the making of only a trifling bequest to her.

These alleged facts, which the plaintiff will endeavor to prove, are, of course, denied by the defendants, who assert that there was no unfair influence exerted over the mother by either of them and that it was not attempted by them to influence or prejudice their mother against Mrs. Lingsfelser and they will also contend that Mrs. Carier was in the possession of her unimpaired faculties and fully competent to make the will that she did.

When the case came up in the circuit court some days ago before Judge O'Rourke the defendant's attorneys filed an affidavit for a change of venue and Judge O'Rourke appointed John Morris, sr, as the special judge to sit on the bench during its trial. Judge Robert Lowry appears as the attorney for the plaintiff and Judge Allan Zollars and Judge W. G. Colerick as the attorneys for the defendants.

OCTOBER WEATHER,

As Predicted by Rev. Ira Hicks, the Prognosticator.

Rev. Ira Hicks, the weather prophet gives out the following as the weather predictions for October: "October begins bright and cool, growing warmer in west, with secondary storms crossing the country from 2d to 4th. Frosty nights will follow. Another warm storm wave will start from west about the 5th, bringing rain along its path to the east during 6th to 10th. Cold and frost will attend, clearing conditions following. The 13th and 14th are reactionary storm dates, with full moon 14th. Cold and frosty weather will follow storm flurries about these dates. The 18th to 23d is a storm period affected by both Venus and Mercury. Storms on lakes and seas will be dangerous This is especially true of the reactionary storm on touching the 25th and 26th. Venus on the 31st, Mercury on the 26th, new moon 28th, and Vulcan 30th, compose a combination that renders the closing day of the month precarious on land and sea. Rain, turning to sleet and snow, attended by dangerous gales on the waters. Cold and freezing follow."

COMPLAINT comes from some quarters against the employment by the city of private detectives. The people who do the complaining are the ones who desire to break the law. Other cities have private detectives and if we had a few more it might be better. Give us enough of them to secure the enforcement of all the laws.

THE winter club season, as was noted in the society columns of THE SENTINEL of last Saturday, has begun, some of these social organizations holding their "openings" this week and inaugurating the work for the winter. That these literary clubs, where the mind is developed by the study of literature, science, art and history, are productive of great good no one can doubt. Giving due time for books, and what are classified as amusements, and for social duties, there is room and place for the literary club, and may they live long and prosper. They do a grand work and are educators for every one who is a member of any of them.

THE board of public safety has adopted sobriety as one of the necessary qualifications of the employes of the different departments under their control, and whenever they find a man who thinks more of his own appetite for liquor than he does of his work, they quietly let him go. This is right and the best people of Fort Wayne are with them. Intemperate men are not wanted in any occupation in life, and corporations and business firms are rapidly raising the ban against them. We hope the board of public safety will continue this good work on all lines. Their reform measures have already worked a great benefit to our city and a continuance of it will meet with general approval.

THIS is the autumn of the year, and the horn of plenty has been opened to scatter its treasures far and wide. It is nature's carnival, for then the fruits and the grain are gathered and the products of the tree and the vine are placed in storehouses for the winter's use. And then how beautiful are the autumn weeks. The spring with tender verdure the summer with its passionate effloresence are quite eclipsed by the vivid splendor of autumn, which redeems the promise of both the spring and the summer, and which is the full consummation of all the pledges of the younger year. The autumn combines the ministry of beauty and of utility. It is radiant with all that delights the eye and it abounds with everything which satisfies the hope and brings a reward for toil. It is lovely with that indefinable grace which heralds the process of decay, and it is opulent in all of the evidences of nature's vitality and generosity. It is effulgent with a hectic beauty which speaks of death, and it is riotous with a joy of existence which is not clouded by the approach of early dissolution. It is the carnival of the "varied year."

OUR democratic contemporaries are making prodigious efforts to create the impression that the people are exceedingly prosperous, that manufactories are running full handed, and that workmen are all employed at remunerative wages. All this is given as the result of democratic policy. Even the FORT WAYNE SENTINEL takes up the subject and makes the assertion.—Gazette

THE SENTINEL sent its reporters to the factories in this city and published just what the proprietors or managers told them in regard to their business. They all, with but few exceptions, reported business as reviving in their different lines and were very much encouraged by the general outlook. They are employing more men than they have for many months and many of the factories are running ten hours a day, and in some cases longer hours of work are in force. The Pennsylvania company's shops, which are a sort of barometer of the condition of the industrial business of our city, are running all of their departments ten hours a day and are paying the same wages they have paid for years. They report things very prosperous and look for a bright winter. It might be a good thing for the Gazette to send their reporters around to these different factories, as THE SENTINEL did, and find out for themselves that good times have really come to Fort Wayne. We know that there are many men out of employment in our city at the present time, but most of them are trainmen who lost their positions during the strike, and these places in many cases have been filled by outsiders. We believe that good times have come to stay, and that in a few months our city will have its old time prosperity in every branch of business.

Temperance in the South.

The temperance party strengthened its hold on Arkansas at the recent election in that state, voting down license by a majority of 1,932 in a total of 97,256, the count standing 49,594 against and 47,662 for. Local option sentiment is in the ascendency in most other southern states, as well as in Arkansas, and so overwhelming is the majority on that side that actual prohibition is enforced in nearly every county in some states. In Mississippi, for instance, the sale of liquor is permitted in only six counties.

The rural districts are especially uncompromising in their opposition to the liquor traffic, the planters and employing classes generally taking the lead in temperance matters, doing everything in their power to educate and control popular sentiment. The negroes are, as a rule, friendly to the interests of the liquor men, but the colored vote in the south has ceased to be a factor of first importance. Only a small percentage of the negroes vote. The black men have become indifferent and rarely exert themselves to the exercise of the elective franchise conferred on them by constitutional amendment. Hence the intelligent white element is in undisputed control of local legislation.

The south has been a stronghold of temperance since the close of the war. It became so from force of circumstances. Conditions compelled the people during the long period of reconstruction (not political, but material reconstruction) to practice rigid economy at every point. The luxury of whisky drinking was one of the first things to be lopped off. The habit of temperance once contracted became second nature, and then by natural process of evolution a solidly grounded principle.

Liquor drinking to excess in the south is rare. In the country it is held to be disgraceful, and even in the larger communities the practice is in rank disfavor. Public and private sentiment in the south is educated to a keen distaste for liquor drinking and all that pertains thereto. Therein lies the secret of the strength of temperance movements in most southern states.

And for that matter, without such an awakened public conscience any and all temperance movements will meet with most indifferent and unsatisfactory progress.

She Knows How to Fight.

Mary F. Sallade is a woman in New York city who has made considerable money in business through inventions of her own. She bought a home on Twenty-fourth street, but found the neighborhood so disreputable that she was not willing to bring up her little daughter there. Then she began an onslaught to clean out the block. She naturally antagonized other property owners and residents on her square, and they began to fight her. They raked over the ashes of her dead past in hopes to find something buried there which would redound to her discredit. They named various individuals with whom she had been involved in legal tussles.

But Mary Sallade had had two husbands and frankly warned her enemies that she had learned how to fight. She wrote a newspaper letter detailing her life history minutely and spreading out thin with her own fair hands the ashes in which they had hoped to make a find. She laughed them to scorn in a column which shows she could have made her fortune as a war correspondent in busier days than these piping times of peace. Thus she "jaws" back at her opponents:

If Jake Scheider, who keeps the Arlington across the way, thinks he can terrify me by bringing up this man Crans, who can tell me the story of my troubles with Henry Edward Sharpe, he is mistaken in me, that is all. I beat Crans and broke him, and if he had as much as a woodshed that he could call his own I would break him again. Every one with whom I have had a struggle is now dead or broken. They laughed at me then, but I have the last laugh.

Sharpe is dead, and the Bakers woman is dead. Crans is broken. Others will be broken before I get through with them. If Jake Scheider thinks that it will pay him to assault the character of a woman like me, let him go ahead.

But he will be sorry for it.

Wheat Fed Beef and Pork.

The farmers of this country will learn one great lesson from the peculiar condition of the grain market. Never before in our history was wheat cheaper than corn. The drought and failure of the corn crop in many parts of the land will make corn continue to be high priced. The result has been in many places that farmers are feeding wheat to their live stock instead of corn. They have found that it is even a better food for the animals. Corn fattens without making a large growth of muscle and bone. Hogs fed on corn exclusively, while very fat, are weak in bone and small in frame. The best pork and beef have been found to come from animals fed on wheat. The flavor is superior to that of corn fed meat. A mixture of the two grains together would probably make the ideal feed. One live stockman goes so far as to say he believes the present depression in price is a real godsend to the farmers, since it will teach them the feeding value of wheat. He has known of this cereal's being sold and shipped abroad at such low prices that it would have paid far better if fed to the live stock.

The verdict is generally in favor of wheat fed meat. Perhaps our surplus wheat can hereafter be always used in this way, and that there need never be a glut of this grain again. Probably even before the population grows up even with our western wheatfields there will be comparatively little to export.

Artesian wells can be made to "artese," as it were, in the Dakotas, then millions of acres of land can be cultivated for a full crop every year, and millions of thrifty and industrious people will be made happy in the northwest. The result of an experiment in sinking one well in the lately ceded Sioux lands gives promise of bountiful irrigation. It is a complete success. If this well gives water, then other wells in the vicinity will do the same, and 10,000,000 more of fertile acres can be added to the domain for settlement.

LATE FALL FASHIONS.

STYLISH APPEARANCE OF THE NEW SCOTCH CAMERON CAPES.

Novelties in Short Jackets and Long Cloaks. New Dress Goods and Fall Costumes. Hats and Bonnets. Evening Dress For Men. Ties, Collars and Shirts.

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Perhaps there is nothing new presented this season that is prettier or more chic than the Scotch cameron capes, with their woolly outsides and canny plaid facings. These plaids are the regular clan plaids used when the kilted legions marched down the rocky defiles of the land of oatmeal scones and "fushky." The MacGregors, the Campbells and the Cameron ons and I know not how many others would have their eyes brightened by the sight of the comfortable long capes now on view. They are fuzzy on the surface and warm rather than fine and sleek, but there is no gainsaying their stylish appearance. They are made to match the suit or not, as best pleases the wearer. There are winter stockings made in the same plaids, and ribbons also, and a few twilled plaids for dress skirts. These are shown in the green and blue plaids so well liked some 30 years ago. There are black capes, too, lined with plaid, or with a plaid silk hood, or with a black velvet capuchin. All the butterfly capelets are gone where all discarded fashions go.

This season brings us a lot of short jackets made of black oxford cloth, havana and navy beaver and boucle, or a sort of astrakhan cloth. Some of these, however, are three-quarter length. I should not forget the chinchilla cloth, which is simply astrakhan cloth in gray and white. The "nigger head" is also used in these jackets with good effect, and often the ground to these is red or some bright color, with the tufts above it, so that the under color shows very little, but still does show. There is a cape called the richelieu, which resembles the military very closely. Irish frieze is seen in many long circular capes, also long coats, and no end to the long cloaks of handsome brocaded wools. Many of these are richly trimmed with fur.

There have arrived this week a few novelties, among them some Peking niche silk, which is absolutely indescribable, some crape vareeh and a pebbly surfaced wool goods called cheviotine. There is a greenish, leathery looking stuff made, I should judge, of silk waste and wool, called frog's throat, and among the silks a faced silk called Peking. Then there is heavy silk in Scotch plaid, some mirror moire in entirely new effects, some drap de venise looking as if it had fallen from some old painting, china armure and princess of silk. All these are made novel by weave, special treatment and coloring.

In wools there is nothing decidedly new unless the wide wale camel's hair and melton and whipcords, with a few new fancies worked out in Scotch cheviots.

These last are seen in mordore, gray and red in lovely tones. A red cheviot trimmed with velvet of a darker shade, and jetted galloon, with a yoke of white point de venise, made a beautiful fall gown. A pearl gray cheviot, with draped overskirt trimmed with white vandyke point and with rush green accessories, made another beautiful costume. I have never seen cheviot in such rich colorings before nor in qualities so fine, as that is generally a material intended to give rather an appearance of warmth than fineness. The effect of the fine twilled cheviot is much like camel's hair, with something of itself at the same time.

With one of these costumes is worn a round black felt hat turned up all around and with the top covered with handsome green tips. With the red gown there was a mite of a toque, with an alsatian bow of red velvet and a black aigret. I mention these to show that almost every costume requires a special hat or bonnet bearing the colors at least, if not some of the material. Regular turbans are often seen with a bit of the gown as trimming.

Is there really any change in men's evening dress? If there is, I cannot tell where it is, but the swell tailor who gave me the picture says that the collar turns over farther, lies flatter, and that the tails are in some manner curved to fit the figure better, and he said that collars are high, ties are wider and the front of the shirt may be embroidered, and the telescopic hat and the ribbon watch fob are quite the thing. If this is all the change the succeeding years bring to mankind, I do not know whether to pity or congratulate them.

Gold Buttons For Babies.

The gold buttons for babies' frocks have been largely replaced by sets of tiny gold pins, united, as the buttons were, by slender gold chains. Every mother will appreciate the value of this change. Six buttonholes were needed for the stud sets, and if a little gown tightened or loosened there was no adjustment possible. The pins do away with work and permit all sorts of lapping over or letting out.

SONS OF FAMOUS SIRES.

Judge Oliver Wendell Holmes One of the Juniors Who Have Become Distinguished.

Cervantes said that a good name is better than riches, and the Old Testament declares that a good name is better than precious ointment, but many a young man has begun life seriously handicapped because he bore just such a name. Great men seem to have a penchant for naming their sons after themselves, and the sons have cause to regret the fact in sackcloth and ashes, for no matter what meritorious thing they may do they are always unfavorably contrasted with the superior greatness of a famous sire. Many of these sons, however, do not rattle around in the name they bear. Oliver Wendell Holmes, Jr., is an eminent lawyer and judge in Boston, and he has a war record that any man would be proud of.

He was a member of the class of '61 in Harvard, but was so patriotic that he could not wait for commencement day. He enlisted in the Fourth battalion of infantry and wrote his class poem while awaiting marching orders at Fort Independence. In July, 1861, he was first lieutenant of infantry, and later was in the thick of the fight, as three wounds proved. At Ball's Bluff he received a gunshot wound in the breast, and when he was a captain at Antietam a bullet plowed a furrow through his neck.

His third wound was received near Fredericksburg, and this time a bullet struck him in the heel. In 1863 he was made lieutenant colonel of the Twentieth Massachusetts infantry as a reward for his gallant services, and the following year was on the staff of General Wright at Petersburg. After the war he studied law at Cambridge and received the degree of LL. B. in 1866. He began the practice of his profession in Boston, was professor for some time at the Cambridge law school and was elevated to the bench of the supreme judicial court in 1882.

Among the other namesakes of famous sires or grandsires who are promising young men are John W. Mackay, Jr., George M. Pullman, Jr., John D. Rockefeller, Jr., Potter Palmer, Jr., Cornelius Vanderbilt, Jr., Elihu Root, Jr., Ulysses S. Grant, Jr., George W. Shiras, Jr., and William C. Endicott, Jr.

MUST SIGN A PLEDGE.

Northwestern University Students Must Promise to Forbear From Hazing.

Evanston, Ills., is a prohibition town, but the only pledge the students of Northwestern university are required to sign is a pledge that they will not indulge in the intoxicating joys of hazing. This pledge the student must sign, or he will not prove acceptable in the eyes of Henry Wade Rogers, A. M., LL. D., the popular and brainy young president of the university. If there is one thing President Rogers detests more than another, it is hazing, and during his regime there is no place in the university's curriculum for that great college diversion, the cane rush or any other form of brutal amusement.

President Rogers is 40 years of age, but time has laid a gentle finger upon him, and he looks like a man of 30. He was born in Trenton Falls, N. Y., and was adopted by his uncle, Henry W. Rogers, an eminent lawyer of Buffalo. He is keen eyed, quick and dignified and is a scholar of high acquirements. He was educated at Hamilton college and the University of Michigan and then began the study of law in the office of Judge Thomas M. Cooley, ex-chief justice of Michigan and ex-interstate commerce commissioner. He assisted Judge Cooley in preparing his well known legal work on torts and afterward practiced his profession in Minneapolis as a partner of the late Eugene M. Wilson, one of the most eminent members of the Minnesota bar.

Later he became professor of law in the University of Michigan and established such a reputation as a writer of legal topics that he was offered the editorship of one of the leading law journals of the country, but did not accept. He was dean of the University of Michigan law school for eight years and for the past four years has occupied his present high office at the head of one of the largest educational institutions of the United States. In 1876 he married Miss Emma Winner, daughter of Rev. John Ogden Winner of New Jersey.

House of Lords Pays Its Way.

Whatever may be the shortcomings of the house of lords as a political institution, it pays its way. In the last financial year it earned over £25,000 in fees on private bills and judicial proceedings. There is also an item of £126 13s., being fees paid on the introduction of peers. Against this stands a charge of £32 10s., fees due to Garter king of arms. It is interesting to note that before the sum was paid over income tax amounting to 18s. 11d. was rigorously subtracted.

Saving Himself.

The late Professor Hyrtl was once in the room when Professor Langer was conducting the examination of an aspirant for the medical degree. Langer handed the student a small bone, saying: "Mr. Candidate, here is a bone. Don't look at it, but tell me from feeling it what kind of a bone it is, whether it belonged to the left or right side of the body and whether it was a part of a man or woman."

The poor student blushed from embarrassment. There was a large audience present, and he saw failure staring him in the face. He cast a helpless glance at Hyrtl, who moved about restlessly in his chair for a moment, and then sprang to his feet. "And tell me, Mr. Candidate," he cried out, the spirit of anger lighting up his large, blue eyes, "after answering the questions of my dear colleague the name of the original possessor of this bone, and where and in what street he lived."

This unexpected outburst "saved the day" for the poor candidate, but Professor Langer ever after declined to conduct an examination when Hyrtl was present.—Argonaut.

A Great Dog.

"When I was a-livin back east," said the man with the ginger beard, "I owned one of those here little woolly Scotch terriers that was one of the smartest animals you ever see. Funny thing! One day my wife was readin in the paper that woolly dogs wasn't goin to be in fashion that summer, and she says to me, in a jokin sort of a way, 'I guess we will haf to sell Dagobert—that was his name—and git a nice, fashionable, smooth haired dog.' 'All right,' says I, still keepin up the joke. Now, what do you suppose that there dog went and did?"

"Mebbe he committed suicide," ventured the grocer. "I have heard of dogs havin their feelin's hurt so bad that they killed theirselves."

"Not much he didn't! Didn't I jist tell you he had a whole lot of sense? He jest snaked a quarter out'n the box where we kept the small change to pay the milkman and the newspaper boy and went down the barber shop and had his hair cut, that's what he did!"—Indianapolis Journal.

A Minister's Wife Who Dresses Her Family in Excellent Taste—How a Small Income Went a Long Way.

The puckers in many a mother's forehead are deepened as she studies how to dress her boys and girls in a respectable manner on the small amount that is available.

A minister's wife in a small town near Fort Wayne was confronted by this discouraging situation, but her woman's wit and a few ten cent packages of diamond dyes solved the problem, and handsome clothes were soon evolved from a pile of odds and ends.

The Home, Housekeeper, Ladies' Home Companion, and other household papers have published many articles telling how to use diamond dyes in making new clothes out of old. Pretty dresses, handsome cloaks, serviceable stockings, and gay hat ribbons and feathers are obtained at but little expense, not only for the children, but for the mothers as well.

The ease with which diamond dyes are used is really surprising. They make beautiful colors that never crock and are non-fading. "While there are other package dyes, there are none so easily used, nor such fast colors," says Jean Hunt in a recent number of The Home. "I have tried other dyes, but the diamond color the most goods. Their fast stocking black is the only black dye for cotton I have ever found that makes a fast black which never turns gray when washed."

COSMOPOLITE DONAN.

He Hailed From South Dakota and "Still Keeps on Hailing."

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—"I hail from Devil's Lake, S. D., and it's a good place to hail from so long as one keeps on hailing. I should not think of going back there to live. I was outlawed from two states soon after the close of the war, and I have outlawed myself from Dakota. In truth, I can't answer your question as to my residence, for I am a cosmopolite. I am somewhat like that young lady in the old story who, being asked what was her native place, replied: 'I never had any. My father was an itinerant Methodist preacher.' I was born in Hinds county, Miss., but my present residence you will find in the directions on those letters."

The speaker was Colonel Peter Donan, commonly called Pat Donan, and it was in his room at the hotel. His table was well covered with letters addressed "Colonel P. Donan, United States," "Colonel Patrick Donan, New York," and so on.

Colonel Donan is tall, rather spare and nervous in manner and appearance, with very mild blue eyes, light hair, beginning to show gray, and a full beard, which is turning from light brown to a lighter shade. From crown to heel he is the typical thin, wiry southern blond.

"This erratic life, of which much is said," he remarked, "resulted from a series of unforeseen events—in fact, I was kicked into it. I was down on my knees playing marbles in Paris, Mo., just like any other big boy, on the 6th of July, 1861, and on the 8th I was under fire in what they then called a battle. Indeed they had pictures of it in the illustrated papers and told of 'showers of shot.' What nonsense! That destroyed all my faith in war history, and I have never had any since. Ninety-nine per cent of it is a lie. That was the merest skirmish, but we had a fine Federal regiment captured and only lost it through the folly of Tom Harris. Our next affair amounted to something, though, for it was the making of General Grant."

"Ah, how was that?"

"It was at Hickman's Mill, on Salt river, in Monroe county. We were under General Martin E. Greene—Missouri state troops, you know. Grant was very doubtful of his raw troops and knew if he was defeated he was lost, for there was much talk about his habits. So he advanced with great caution. There was a little very careful shooting, and that night General Greene slipped away and joined Price. So Grant got his start and afterward acknowledged that he there learned the important lesson that the other fellow was likely to be as shy of him as he was of the other fellow. The papers told of a 'terrific charge' and 'the ground strewed with dead and wounded,' but there was no such thing. Lord, how the papers did lie in those days!

COLONEL PETER DONAN.

"It was that fall, in the retreat from Missouri, that I made my first big bluff. I wrote to headquarters that I was not made for a private soldier and would not be one; that I was going to get out of this armed mob and go to Virginia, where they had some real war, and especially I was going to get somewhere where everybody would not look on me as a boy and call me Pete. There was no discipline, and every fellow came and went at will and begged, bought or stole his provisions, but I did want to leave in some sort of style. I was sure I could soon sunburn and roughen up to pass for 21, though I was not quite 17. I went to north Missouri, rode right through Fremont's army and eastward into West Virginia, slipped through to the Confederates and got a commission. When I was 18, I reckon I was the youngest colonel in either army."

These reminiscences led the colonel into a lengthy digression on the war as seen from the southern side, the blunders of reconstruction and the meanness of some western politicians, and this last evidently roused unpleasant memories, for his eye lighted with an unusual fire and his language was singularly forcible as he gave his opinion of the Dakota senators from first to last. "We are only fairly into this experiment, and if we admit the riffraff of the world we shall have to give up a republic."

As a newspaper writer Colonel Donan has been compared to a mountain torrent, a tropical hurricane, a rapid rushing river and a spouting well. Opie Read spoke of him as a "freak of letters who crowds literary facts close upon the heels of capering grotesqueness, a poet without perceptible passion and a literary photographer without the scent of chemicals." Before attaining his majority he was employed by Archbishop Hughes as a writer for Catholic papers, and he has since written for papers of every shade of politics, but always in his own torrid style. In short, Colonel Donan is just what the tumultuous times of war and reconstruction would naturally make of an ardent, impulsive southern boy who had received a complete classical education at the age of 16 and was burning to emulate the heroes of antiquity.

A DIANA OF THE SIERRAS.

Miss Marie Clark and Her Achievements With Rod and Gun.

Despite the opposition of men who do not believe she should have the ballot, the unemancipated woman is rapidly moving toward the coveted goal. She may still be a slave politically, but her presence is being felt more and more every day in men's pursuits and men's amusements. She hunts, swims, fishes, rides a man's bicycle in bloomers, plays tennis and golf, owns and races her own yacht, trains trotters and thoroughbreds, fences and goes in for all the health giving outdoor sports that have hitherto been considered within the province of man alone. The end of the century woman was a rarity a few years ago, but today she is here, there and everywhere. A good type of her is Miss Marie Clark of Gilroy, Cal., a slip of a girl of 17 summers who can bag the swift quail on the wing as it breaks cover, smash a blue rock target as it flies into the air from a trap, shoot a running deer through the heart with her winchester rifle, whip shy trout from mountain streams with her slender rod and rough it in the Californian wilds with the endurance and pluck of an argonaut of 1849.

MARIE CLARK.

Despite these athletic achievements, however, Miss Clark is no headstrong, untutored M'liss, no wild daughter of the Sierras, but a refined and cultivated woman, who can draw and paint as well as she can shoot and fish, and who is not only an honor scholar in the great school of nature, but in the high school curriculum of California as well.

Miss Clark is the daughter of Dr. J. Clark, naturalist, scientist and sportsman, and comes naturally by her great love for outdoor sports. Her hunting costume is simple, sensible and unconventional. Her outer clothing is of canvas, the skirt barely reaching to the knees. Under her regulation canvas hunting coat is a shirt waist of wool, and her feet and ankles are protected by Canadian hunting boots of light alum tanned leather, lacing to the knee and shaped at the foot like a moccasin.

When this California Diana abandons the chase for the sport Walton loved, she wears light rubber boots that reach to her hips. During a three weeks' hunting trip recently Miss Marie shot a fine buck weighing 65 pounds and bled and dressed her game as artistically as a veteran hunter. She has been an ardent disciple of Walton since she entered her teens and has been an expert with rifle and shotgun for two years past.

MYERS MUST SPEAK ALONE.

Candidate Owen Too Sick to Keep His Engagements to Speak.

The joint debate between Captain Myers and "Rev." W. D. Owen, the respective Democratic and Republican candidates for secretary of state, is off. The wiser heads in the Republican party had all along regarded a joint debate as a foolish thing and "viewed with alarm" the certain humiliation that awaited their candidate. This prospect or something else made Mr. Owen very sick; so sick, in fact, that he went to a Michigan sanitarium. The other day Chairman Gowdy wrote Chairman Taggart positively refusing to carry out the programme arranged. Of course nothing was left for Chairman Taggart but to accept the declination. However, he made the suggestion and request that should Mr. Owen recover his health sufficiently to permit him to re-enter the canvass later on that the debate be carried out according to the programme originally laid out, either in whole or in part. Captain Myers stands ready at any moment to meet his opponent, and Chairman Taggart will insist on the joint debate in the event that Mr. Owen once more enters the canvass. Captain Myers will keep the appointments as originally made.

Do Not Change Townships.

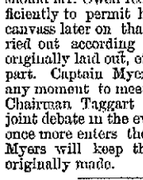
CERTIFICATES OF NOMINATIONS.

The Chairman's First Duty Should Be to File Them.

"The importance of giving early attention to the matter of filing certificates of nominations cannot be overestimated," said Chairman Taggart. "Though it is a matter of vital interest to the party and the candidates themselves, I find it is one that is most often neglected. This is probably due more to procrastination than a failure to realize the importance of the matter. It should be the first duty of the county chairman to see that nominations, are properly certified, that names are given with absolute correctness as to spelling, etc., and that all legal requirements are complied with. And candidates in their own interest should make it a point to be certain that their chairmen have performed their duty. I would request all chairmen and candidates to give this matter their earliest attention."

A Prisoner in Bed.

Mrs. Mary A. Tupper has been released, at Wilton, Me., from the custody of extreme female weakness and nervousness, which kept her a prisoner in bed, unable to walk. Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound went to the root of her trouble, and gave her the liberty of health, so that after taking two bottles she was able to go out of doors and surprise her husband and friends by her improvement.



She says: "Women should beware of dizziness, sudden faintness, backache, extreme lassitude, and depression. They are danger signals of female weakness, or some derangement of the uterus or womb. Take Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and be thankful for your life as I am. It only costs a dollar to try it. It will pay.

the last days of the twentieth century. All branches of the government are in the hands of the gentler sex—if the women of that age may be referred to as the gentler portion of the race. Miss Coghlan claims that her play will frighten the opponents of woman suffrage into submission to the inevitable.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

Fireman Day Dies From Injuries Received Sunday.

Conductor Rogers Held Up by a Tramp at Elida—Bad Wreck at Mansfield.

A. H. Day, the fireman who was injured in the Wabash wreck at Maumee last Sunday, died at the hospital in Toledo at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning. He leaves a wife, but no children.

BALL BEARINGS A FAILURE

The experiment with ball bearings for wagons has not proved satisfactory. The time has not come when it will pay. Professor Sweet, who made the experiments, says "it would be better to use the same money to put wide tires on the wheels and cut off the for ward axles so as to bring the forward wheels the width of the tires nearer together than the hind ones. He writes: "I have just been over a dirt road where 100 tons of limestone are drawn every day, and the ruts were horrible when only common wagons were used. The road is now splendid, all owing to the use of half the number of wagons built as above described, while the ball bearings could at best reduce the power required to draw farm wagons only from 5 to 10 per cent The wide tires and short axle wagons would reduce the cost of hauling on the farm roads 40 to 50 per cent., and the cost of the changing to ball bearings would equal the cost of the new wheels and front or back axles."

AN ENGINEER'S THRILLING STORY.

Engineer James Root, whose heroism saved 300 men, women and children from the forest fire which wiped out Hinckley, Minn., arrived in New York yesterday with his wife and son from his home near St. Paul. To a reporter he told the following story of the act which has made him famous: "I was making my run from Duluth to St Paul, when we ran into a smoke so dense that, although it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon, you could not see your hand before you. We went through about forty miles of this, and was about three miles from Hinckley, when we got in clear daylight. About half a mile further on I saw people rushing toward me from all directions, most of them from Hinckley. I was forced to stop, and then they shouted: "The town is being burned to cinders. For God sake save us." I could see no fire, but all of a sudden, while three women were standing by the engine, the wind came with such a rush that it swept them clean away and nothing has been seen of them since. Then I told the people to jump in, and, as I was stepping up into my cab, everything seemed to be a ball of fire. It was as sudden as a flame bursting out in a lamp. I let go the throttle and started to back down to Shunk lake, about six miles away. We'd scarcely got moving before the train from beginning to end was a rolling ball of fire. I saw the thick panes in the cab bend with heat; then they burst their frames and leaped to the top of the cab where they were smashed, and the pieces gashed my head and throat. All I remembered then was dodging my head to avoid the flames, which came hissing in at the window, and I must have fainted, for I came to as the engine stopped and I saw that I had unconsciously shut off the steam My hands then were so swelled with the heat that they looked as if I had boxing gloves on The fireman came out of the water tank and shoveled more coal into the furnace, and all I remember after that is the fireman saying 'We're done for this time, sure," and I thought to myself, 'Yes, I guess it'll be over soon now.' When I came to I was in the slush and mud of Skunk lake."

BRIEF MENTION.

Supt. C. D. Law went to Chicago this morning.

Nickel Plate Conductor J. H. Frost is taking a lay off.

August Ernold has resumed his old position in the electric light works.

Last Monday the Nickel Plate carried seventy car loads of grapes west bound through this city.

George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne works, is working again, having recovered from a week's illness.

There was a test of the Van Slack fire extinguisher at the Feeble Minded Institute at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Brakemen M. L. Houden, G. B. Kinsie and F. H. Woolery have returned to their runs on the Nickel Plate after a lay off.

William Kruse, who had been on the sick list for a week or more, returned to his duties at the Anthony Wayne works today.

Thomas Griffin is again at work, after ten days' lay off on account of the injury he received by a fall on the streets He is employed in the electric light works.

Tomorrow is the day set for the democratic barbecue at Huntington. The Wabash is expecting to carry a big crowd and is making preparations accordingly.

Dr. Carr, of Ligonier, stopped off here a few hours this morning, on route home from California He is an uncle to George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne works.

William Case, night engineer at the Wabash shops, has gone to Forrest, Ohio, to visit his mother, who is in her eighty-sixth year and who he has not seen for twelve years.

William Russman, who was forced to resign as fireman at Rhinesmith & Simonson's factory on account of ill health has resumed that position again, having recovered his health.

Harry Hayes left yesterday for South River, N. J., where he will set up a 125 horse power Bass improved Corliss engine in the factory of the American Enamel Brick and Tile company.

F. H. Booster was the successful bidder on the contract to erect the Hamilton library building. The contract price is a trifle above $2 200 Work on the building will be commenced at once

William Yates, one of the Wabash engineers who lost his position through the strike, has started a bakery at 14 Michigan avenue. Mr. Yates ran an engine on the Wabash for twenty years.

Mort Tyger, shipping clerk for Charles Faulk & Company, has returned from a three days' bicycle tour. He visited Adrian, Mich., and all the intermediate points, traveling nearly 350 miles.

Wabash engine 96, which was ditched at Maumee Sunday, was brought here for repairs this morning. It is damaged to the extent of $700. The damage to the cars and track will probably amount to $3,000, making the wreck a pretty costly affair.

A New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio train ran into a freight on the Baltimore and Ohio road at Mansfield, Ohio, last night, causing a very bad wreck. The engineer and fireman of the former train were badly injured and fifteen cars were demolished.

While the papers are busy writing up Peter Rijabart, it might interest the public to know that that person is no doubt on his way to Portland, Ore. Last Monday he purchased a ticket at the Wabash depot in this city for Oregon and left on a train a few minutes later.

Missouri river roads announce that after October 20 all freight rates to Portland and adjacent points will advance from seven to twenty-five per cent. This is a discrimination in favor of San Francisco, though the object is a mystery. Local railway circles are much disturbed over the situation.

The Logansport Pharos says: "James McCrea, president; J. T. Brooks, vice president, and D S. Gray, general agent of the Pennsylvania lines, arrived in the city this afternoon on Panhandle train No. 21. They will be joined this evening by the directors of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road and the party will leave in the morning for an inspection of the Toledo, Peoria and Western. The two companies are preparing to operate the Toledo, Peoria and Western jointly between Effner and the Mississippi river."

Wabash shopmen who are off duty: C. G. Gissman, sick, H. C. Lehrman, gone to St. Louis to spend a week, E A. Coleman, sprained hand, John Keese, sick, J. E Carry sick, and J E Plank, sick. James Conroy, of the Blacksmith department, who has been sick for some time, has recovered and will resume work this week.

Frank Kirchner, formerly a Panhandle train dispatcher, has invented a new rail which is said to be a novelty. He has great faith in the invention while others think it is impracticable. The principle of the rail is that the top of the rail where the wear comes can be renewed without disturbing the main rail, the rail being constructed in two pieces.

Luckily for railway conductors the average traveller keeps the seat in which he is first found. The conductor is by no means the infallible person that some folks think him, and only this habit of the traveling public enables him to keep track of newcomers. Every stranger who moves from one seat to another thus becomes an object of suspicion to the conductor, and is watched lest he be trying to ride free

Last night the city marshal of Pierceton arrested two tramps, whom he found in a box car on the Pittsburg road, on suspicion of being implicated in the murder of the tramp barber at Delphos a few days ago. Officer Stoll went down to Pierceton to investigate the case, but refused to take charge of the men, because he was convinced they were not the men wanted in Ohio The tramps were armed and a charge of carrying concealed weapons was filed against them

Conductor Rogers, of west-bound Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago freight train No. 76, was held up by a tramp at Elida Saturday night, about 9 o'clock. The train was standing on a switch and Mr. Rogers was going from the caboose to the engine, when the tramp stepped from between the cars and demanded his money. It happened that the conductor had his watch and money in his other clothes in the caboose, and the tramp was not successful in getting anything from him Mr. Rogers was not armed and the tramp escaped.

Every year the Grand Rapids road runs two cheap excursions between Mackinaw and Richmond. One of these excursions is from the south and the other from the north. On the 11th of September the northbound excursion occurred and nearly 2 000 people took advantage of the occasion to visit the northern resorts. Yesterday the southbound excursion, starting at Mackinaw, took place, and there were over 900 people in the party. About half of them went to Detroit and the balance came on to Indiana, about fifty of them stopping at this point

John B Mitchell, for fifteen years bridge superintendent of the Wabash, and for the past four years in the same capacity on the Big Four, has received a handsome promotion to the general directory of the latter road at Cincinnati, as tie master of the entire Big Four system Mr. Mitchell is one of the best practical railroad men in the service, and his services have received proper recognition from the Big Four management. Mr. Mitchell's family will continue their residence in Lafayette for the present. When connected with the Wabash, Mr Mitchell was a frequent visitor at Fort Wayne.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company has filed in the United States court at Indianapolis a suit against the Fort Wayne Electric company, R. T. McDonald, president, alleging that the latter company is infringing on a patent right owned by the Westinghouse company. It is set out in the bill that A. B. Shullenberger is the original inventor of a meter for alternating electric currents, and that the patent was assigned to the Westinghouse company in 1888 The Fort Wayne company, it is averred, has since 1892, been using the meter without right. The complainant demands an injunction against the Fort Wayne company and an accounting.

Meanwhile Harrington had disappeared The merchants lost little by his transactions, unless they loaned Harrington money, as all the goods were reclaimed

Elder Eugene Martin, of Bartholomew county, who is proselyting in the interests of the Christian church, pitched a gospel tent at Azalia, much against the staid old Quakers' wishes in that community. A site for the tent was found with difficulty, and there have been frequent threats to burn it down Mr. Martin and his assistants have also been greatly annoyed by petty persecutions, of which the Friends disclaim knowledge The inhabitants of Azalia are well-to do farmers, but it is said that they are so exceedingly jealous of their settlement that no church, save the Friends, has ever found a footing there.

CHARACTER SKETCH OF A CHARACTER PLAYER.

Born in London of Talented Parentage —Had a Love for the stage from Childhood—Also an Accomplished Musician.

FERDINAND Gottschalk, the actor, was born in London, Eng., Feb. 28, 1858 His parents were lovers of art in all its branches, and from them he inherited an artistic temperament, which made him as a boy delight in mimetic pastime, and which eventually led him to the professional stage. His natural tastes were carefully cultivated by his parents, whose efforts in that direction were seconded by his own application to congenial tasks, and he soon became possessed of many accomplishments He devoted some attention to literary work, and two plays stand to his credit among the products of his pen He is a painter in both oil and water colors, and is not only a performer upon various musical instruments, but has displayed much merit as a composer and improvisatore. His first stage experience was acquired with the Hampstead dramatic society, an organization which he formed among his young associates when he was about 22 years of age, and several of the members of which have obtained prominence upon the stage. In this society he played character parts and eccentric comedy, and during his several years' connection therewith he developed much skill and won considerable fame. The late Rosina Vokes, having often heard flattering mention of his powers, finally made him an offer to become a member of her company. This was in August, 1587, upon the eve of her return to this country after her summer vacation. He accepted the offer, and was en route for these shores within ten days. He made his first appearance on the professional stage in Toronto, Can., playing Paddles in "Which Is Which." He remained a member of this company until Miss Vokes retired from the stage, a retirement which but shortly preceded the decease of that gifted actress and most estimable woman. Upon the occasion of her final appearance, which was made in Washington, D. C., Miss Vokes, having responded to the repeated calls which followed the final fall of the curtain, by signs intimated to Mr. Gottschalk, who was standing in the wings, her desire to have him share with her the call, and, when he hesitated to accept the mute invitation, she called him by name, and, taking his hand in view of the audience, testified her estimation of the value of the support he had rendered her for so many years When Daniel Frohman decided to put upon the stage of the Lyceum theater A. W. Pinero's delightful comedy, "The Amazons," now running at that house, he selected Mr. Gottschalk for the eccentric comedy role of Tweeneways, his impersonation of which is not only one of the most entertaining features of this charming performance, but ranks as one of the most skillful and carefully considered pieces of work ever seen upon this stage, famous as it is for great achievements. Mr. Gottschalk is enthusiastically in love with his chosen profession, delighting in it for art's sake and bestowing unusual care in make up and on all the details which intelligent and conscientious study of his roles suggest as necessary to their faithful portrayal. While associated with Miss Vokes he created nearly thirty parts, all of which bore testimony to his versatility, and he at times played as many as three roles in one evening, differing radically from each other, and in each of which he deftly concealed his identity Mr. Gottschalk is now a member of the Lyceum company and gives promise of a successful career.

Presented with His Own Watch.

An amusing incident occurred in the third inning of the Minneapolis-Detroit game, says the Minneapolis Tribune, when Werden hit a ball a mile over the fence, and tallied three scores thereby. Some of the newspaper men had secured Werden's gold watch from the man the first batsman had intrusted it to, and it was passed out into the field and presented to him just as he took off his hat at the plate in response to the crowd's ovation He bowed his acknowledgments with a flush of pride, and then discovered it was the watch presented to him at Toledo in 1889 by admiring friends.

NOVEL MISSIONARY WORK.

How an Enterprising Domine Made Good Use of His Opportunities.

About the time that the telephone was removed from the saloon and roadhouse an order came to put a telephone in a new parsonage The exchange always followed the policy of keeping the numbers as low as possible, so instead of giving the parsonage telephone a new number the discontinued roadhouse number was simply transferred, and the change was at once printed in the directory. But the man who uses a telephone does not always consult the directory He may remember the number That's how it happened that the minister was called up at midnight just after his phone was put in

"Yes," he answered, "this is 142"

Then to his amazed ear came an inquiry if he could get up a supper for a little "gang" that would be along about 3 in the morning He said he couldn't do it. Then the man at the other end of the wire wanted to know if it was Billy talking and what the something or other was the matter with the "joint" The minister explained as well as he could, and there was a sharp ring off

When the minister learned of the transferred number, he was not at all indignant He said he believed it would be the means of his saving many souls There after when he was called to the phone by some friend a customer of Billy's he took occasion to say that the telephone no longer connected with the roadhouse, but with the parsonage of the new church. "Come out and see me some time," he would add "We have services morning and evening on Sunday, and I'll try to make you have a good time Don't forget the name of the church Drop in any Sunday."

AMAZED THE MINISTER.

He Discriminated.

A Virginia judge once visited a plantation where the darky who met him at the gate asked him which barn he would have his horse put in "Have you two barns," inquired the judge "Yes, sah," replied the darky, 'dat's de ole barn, and mas'r has jes' built a new one" "Where do you usually put the horses of visitors who come to see your master?" "Well, sah, if dey's Methodists or Baptists, we gen'rally puts 'em in de ole barn, but if dey's Episcopal we puts 'em in de new one" "Well, Sam, you can put my horse in the new barn. I'm a Baptist, but my horse is an Episcopalian"—Green Bag.

Maryland By Maryland, Gone Daft Over the Orioles and Baseball

If any one doubts that baseball is the national game they should take a run over to Baltimore just now and circulate in some of the back counties of "Germanville." At every cross road postoffice politics is a dead issue compared with the success of the Baltimores A well known Maryland politician was in Baltimore county a few days ago at a small railway station to take the noonday train for Baltimore The little store and postoffice was kept by an old gentleman, with long white hair and beard, evidently 65 or 70 years of age The politician had to wait for the tram, so he tried to engage the old storekeeper in conversation

"My good friend," inquired the politician, "have you a morning paper for sale?"

"No," replied the old gentleman, "I loaned my paper to Mr Carroll, up the road."

"Was there any startling news in the paper this morning?"

"The Baltimores gained a few points on the New Yorks and Bostons," responded the old gentleman as he chuckled to himself and tugged at his beard, just like Gus Schmelz when the umpire is giving him the worst of it. "You see," continued the old gentleman, enthusiastically "New York and Boston each lost a game and the Baltimores did not play, consequently our boys gained several points on their nearest rivals."

"Is baseball so popular in Maryland now?"

"Yes," replied the old gentleman "If a state election was held to-morrow I believe our captain and catcher, Robbie, would beat both Brown and Rayner for the governorship"

The politician took the next train back to Baltimore, wondering how intelligent people can be so carried away with baseball, especially on the eve of a great political contest.

It is gratifying to Arlie Latham's numerous friends in this city to note that he is still playing that snappy, winning game for Cincinnati which so characterized his work on the local series Several of the eastern clubs are hungry for Arlie's services next season.—Ex

Red Seal BOILER Compound
FOR THE Removal and Prevention of Scale in Steam Boilers.

The attention of engineers and owners of steam boilers is called to the RED SEAL BOILER COMPOUND. It will successfully remove the scale from steam boilers, and also prevent the formation of scale. It is well known that the scale is a powerful non-conductor, and that the waste of fuel is in proportion to the thickness of the scale which becomes attached to the shell, flues, tubes and other parts of the boilers, causing a loss of fuel ranging from one to thirty seven per cent

The Red Seal Boiler Compound is entirely free from acids, and does not injure or corrode the iron. In its action it does not vaporize or pass off with the steam. It can be used with perfect safety by Breweries, Dye Houses, Hotels, Refineries, Laundries, and many other establishments too numerous to mention, where pure live steam is required.

It will prevent incrustation and the forming of new scale, without injury to the boiler. The mineral impurities are gradually softened and dissolved, and are then held in suspension until such time as the boiler is blown out under pressure, or washed out when cold.

The compound is in powder form, dissolves easily in warm water, and, as a liquid, can be applied to the boiler through the pump or injector, or in any other convenient way

All we ask is a trial of RED SEAL BOILER COMPOUND, and we will convince the most skeptical that it is a superior article to many of the so called boiler compounds on the market.

Directions and price list cheerfully furnished on application.

She is said to have a rare contralto voice and promises to make a distinguished singer.

Tomorrow evening, at Randall hall, the reception to Governor Matthews will be held from 8.30 to 9.30 o'clock, and nothing will be left undone by the committee in charge to make the event a success On Friday Senator Turpie will be here and meetings will be held both afternoon and evening in the Saengerbund hall. Great crowds are expected in the city from surrounding territory.

There were two cases in police court this morning, both drunks. One was that of Henry Vance, a soldier, who came from Milwaukee on a furlough. He was arrested last night by Officer Elliott. Vance is addicted to both opium and whisky, but he was an old soldier and no doubt contracted the habits in the army, and for that reason Mayor Oakley let the poor old man off. He promised to leave the city at once Charles Jordon was a well dressed young man also arrested for drunkenness by Officer Elliott. He plead guilty and was sent over.

Mr. and Mrs. Christian A Eberline were divorced at Logansport yesterday. The couple have not lived together for seven years, during which time the lady has made this city her home Concerning the case the Logansport Journal says "Christian A. Eberline was married to Sophia Eberline twenty-four years ago in April For seven years, or since May, 1887, they have been living apart, Sophia having abandoned him Yesterday morning Magee & Funk filed papers asking for a divorce for Christian, and the decree was soon after handed to him"

George W. Orndorf, a retired farmer, died at his home in Churubusco at 9 o'clock yesterday morning of consumption, aged seventy-three years The deceased leaves a wife and five children They are Mrs H. M. Wyatt, of this city, Mrs. Mary Catherine Shoaff, Mrs Ida Hughes, J. W. Orndorf, of Churubusco, and Mrs. Barbara Ressler, of Bluffton. The funeral will be held from the M. Lunch cloths this season are shown in a variety of new designs. Many of them, with finger bowl and tumbler doylies to match, are truly artistic Pure white cloths of glistening damask are the most fashionable. A new cloth shows a border of large pansies carelessly scattered about the edge. The round tumbler doylies are of fine linen, with a wreath of small pansies encircling them, exquisitely embroidered in white silk. The larger finger bowl doylies are shaped like a pansy, with the shading of the blossom outlined in white silk.

SOME NARROW ESCAPES.

Wind Blows Down a Heavy Fence on Calhoun Street.

A Lady Nearly Crushed by the Timbers—Street Car Takes a Wild Plunge—Others.

About 10 o'clock this morning several persons had narrow escapes from serious injury on Calhoun street in front of the Bass block.

Some time ago a high and very heavy board fence was erected in front of the room recently vacated by the C O D clothing store and which is to be soon occupied by the First National bank. The fence was erected for the purpose of keeping out idle spectators whom it was known would throng about to watch the decorators and Italian marble workers there employed

Bill posters had covered the fence with paper and it was therefore very tight. This morning a high wind was blowing from the west Striking the front of the building, the strong current was forced down and against the inside of the fence Finally the supports were weakened and a strong gust blew the heavy fence outward to the sidewalk with a great crash Several persons had just passed and one lady was directly in front of the fence. She barely escaped with her life as the timbers knocked some articles out of her hand and smashed them on the walk. A. L. Randall, the bicycle agent, was standing at the end of the fence talking to an acquaintance and was scared out of a year's growth. Had the accident happened at any other time many persons might have been seriously hurt.

JUMPED THE TRACK

Last evening, near the corner of Jackson and Jefferson streets, a car on the electric short line jumped the track and with a wild plunge ran to the curb and started across the sidewalk. One passenger was badly frightened and shaken up. The motorman was unhurt. The car was off over an hour.

FELL IN THE RIVER

On Sunday last a party of fishermen with lady friends, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. P. Bosworth, went up the St Joe river and spent a pleasant day, but ended it with an almost fatal accident. Two of the gentleman members of the party fell into the river, and were with great difficulty rescued.

Ministers of the Cabinet Summoned

The Situation Extremely Warlike in Its Aspects.

English and Indian Troops Ordered to Concentration Convenient Points and Await Orders.

ANTANIVO, Madagascar, Oct. 1.—A blockade of the ports of the island of Madagascar has been proclaimed by France. The resident general has gone to Tamatave. He has been instructed to take measures to protect the colonists in the event of war.

LONDON, Oct. 3.—All the afternoon papers gravely discuss the hasty summoning of a cabinet council, is it generally accepted as being connected with some serious difficulty with France.

The liberal organ, the Westminster Gazette, handles the subject very tenderly and is evidently anxious not to excite public opinion, and thereby embarass the government. On the other hand the conservative monthpieces discuss the matter more fearlessly and warn France against encroaching upon British rights. The Pall Mall Gazette says:

"A crisis which necessitates the convening of a cabinet council must be very sudden, as the ministers were disposed on their holidays. It is quite possible, however, that propositions have been made to settle the various differences. But, while we gladly recognize the insident admits of favorable interpretation, it is idle to ignore the fact that it is quite possible that the cabinet has been summoned to discuss a new and unexpected cause of friction with France."

The Pall Mall Gazette then refers to the article printed today in the Politique Coloniale, of Paris, which reflects the views of the minister of the colonies, M. Delcasse, and which gives, exclusive of the questions of Egypt and Madagascar, a list of eleven outstanding difficulties between France and England connected with frontiers and similar disputes in various African colonies. The Politique Coloniale, however, says that many of these have practically been settled and that none of them would justify a rupture unless one country was bent upon picking a quarrel with the other, which, the paper adds, is not the case.

The Pall Mall Gazette, in spite of this, says that the article in the Politique Coloniale is unfriendly to the "verge of discourtesy," adding: "And if it reflects the spirit in which the French ministers intend to discuss the difficulties with England, we may prepare for troublesome times. We do not wish to quarrel with France, but, on the other hand we are indisposed to permit trespassing upon our unquestioned rights. The bullying spirit which tells Frenchmen that they have only to brag and bluff enough to force England to surrender may easily lead to trouble."

The Pall Mall Gazette then continues: "The Daily Chronicle says that war between France and England must be regarded as inconceivable madness. It may be madness, but it is not inconceivable. France must be told courteously, but firmly, that we have not the slightest desire to attack or to provoke her, but that, if attacked, we shall defend ourselves to the last extremity."

The Globe also expresses the belief that the hurried calling of the cabinet council is due to disputes with France, adding: "We believe that there is no ground for public alarm or suspicion But we cannot surrender any part of England's rights or shirk any part of her duties. Our strained relations with France are not a matter of a day's growth—not connected entirely with Madagascar. We have points of contact with the French throughout the world and each is positive of having fostered irritation which may easily become strife. It is certain that the same way in which we have allowed ourselves to be outwitted in the far east during the last year, and the manner in which we have stood by while France partitioned our heritage in Siam has done much to persuade the more ignorant or hot headed Frenchmen that England is not so terrible after all."

"Today's news of the blockade of the island of Madagascar sets at rest all doubts as to the immediate business of tomorrow's cabinet council. The ministers have decided upon a resolute course of action and the public will await with anxiety the news of their decision. We want no panic and war fevers, but we need the assurance that our interests will be properly safeguarded and our allies protected. The French will find that we shall have a word to say about the Madagascar question before it is settled, and Lord Rosebery may rely upon the colonists to support him loyally and heartily in the interests of the empire."

The above quotations from the leading afternoon papers of this city give a fair idea of the draft of public opinion here and the gravity of the crisis which has caused the calling of a cabinet council for tomorrow.

The Cause of It.

The dispute between England and France in regard to Madagascar is one of long standing. Madagascar is a large island, separated from the southeastern portion of Africa by the Mozambique channel. It is now really under a French protectorate, although it is claimed in England that at least one-seventh of the island is held by British capital. The French embassy in London shortly answered a communication from the Madagascar consul in London by a formal statement that officially there is no longer such a person as a London Madagascar consul, as, it was added, the agents of France in various countries represent the Hovas government. Early last month the French government evidently determined upon taking decided action in regard to Madagascar, probably believing that the hands of England were tied by the complications brought about through the war between China and Japan. Consequently, M. Le Myre de Villers was sent on a special mission to Madagascar and it was understood he was to all intents and purposes instructed to demand the abdication of the government and to annex the island to France. The following statement was made regarding the mission of M. Le Myre de Villers, recently: "He will first demand a reversion of the treaty of 1885 and will then ask that the treaty of France at Diego Suares be extended to Passandame bay, on the western side of Madagascar, and to Vohemar bay, on the east side of the island, and that Majunga and Nossi Beh, of the west coast, and Fort Dauphin, Tamatave, Mauvaodave and Andovarsan, on the eastern shores, with their adjacent territories, be ceded to France. Finally, he was instructed to demand that the French resident shall have the right to control all the actions of the government of Madagascar, including its foreign policy."

The Gazette of Paris, at the time of the departure of M. LeMyre De Villers, who is just about due at Madagascar, said: "He will call upon the Hova government to satisfy all our demands, and to respect all the clauses of our treaties. In the case of the Hova government accepting this demand, a proctoral summoning our rights and rendering some obscure points clear, will be drawn up. These rights may be summarized as follows: "The installation of a French representative, who will treat exclusively all questions of foreign policy with the powers; the recognition of the right of Europeans to possess property without any retrocession clause; the right of treating with the natives for the hire and farming of property; the registration of all deeds concerning the purchase and hire of property at the French residency; the construction of a railway which the Malagasy government has till now refused; the freedom of navigation of the rivers; the establishment of military stations where the French may think fit; the appointment of a French agent to control and secure the financial resources wasted at the present moment to the detriment of the natives; the installation of a French resident with each of the Malagassey governors, with the object of securing the respect of treaties and the proper collection of the taxes in a word, the effectual application of the protectorate regime which has until now, been nothing but nominal if the Hova ministers do not give entire satisfaction M. DeVilliers will withdraw to one of the vessels of our squadron, and the commander of that squadron will then open the sealed instructions sent to him."

PARIS, Oct. 3.—The Matin this morning says that Madagascar can offer no possible subject for a dispute between France and Great Britain, adding: "Once our differences with the Malagasy government are settled there will be no pretext for a France-British conflict. The relations between the two governments were never more tranquil."

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The officials of the foreign office deny that the summoning of the cabinet tomorrow is due to a hitch in the negotiations with France, in regard to Madagascar, but the necessity of discussing several important international questions, one of the chief subjects to be brought up being the safety of British subjects resident in China. A dispatch was received at the foreign office today from the British consul at Pekin stating that he was making arrangements to insure the safety of the British residents at the Chinese capital.

HOT SHOT

Hurled by Dr. Parkhurst in New York City

At the Police Justices and the Police Department of the Metropolis.

NEW YORK, Oct. 3.—Dr. Parkhurst attracted a large audience to Amity hall last night. He spoke under the auspices of the City Vigilance league. The doctor was evidently suffering from the effects of the severe strain to which he is subjected, as he did not speak with his accustomed ease. Before he concluded he improved sufficiently to hurl some hot shots at the police justices and the police department. The audience was informed by Dr. Parkhurst that to witness the examination of Mr. Goff when he fairly had to ginoble the testimony from them was far better than going to a theatre for amusement. He spoke of the unreliability of the word of the policemen, saying that Ex-Commissioner of Police Voorhis put himself on record by asserting that he seldom put any credence in what a policeman testified. "The character of police court's matters touch more closely the future of the municipality," he said, "than even the police." Dr. Parkhurst read from a letter he had received from a prominent man, in which he offers to any young lawyer in the city a fee of $1,000 for the successful impeachment of a police justice. This offer, the writer explained, would be binding on his heirs and he hoped some of the representatives of the bar would take it up.

GENERAL MILES' RECORD.

When His Hardest Fighting Was Really Done.

Col. R. S. Robertson, whose brilliant record as a soldier is well known, and who at one time served under General Miles, contributes the following with reference to that gallant soldier:

Editor Sentinel:

In an interesting article in your paper Tuesday evening, entitled "Retiring Generals," of General Miles it is said "that his hardest fighting has been done since the war." I think the writer of that sentence can hardly be familiar with Miles' war record, for, splendid as were his Indian campaigns, I think he himself would accord them second place to those in which he participated with the first division of the second corps in the army of the Potomac. Entering the service in 1861 as a lieutenant, he leaped at a bound to the rank of colonel, was brevetted brigadier general, then promoted to full rank, brevetted again major general, and promoted again to that full rank; commanding a brigade as colonel, a division, and, for a time, the second corps; and every promotion was won without political backing, but solely by gallant fighting qualities, in that magnificent division, the one whose record stands highest in the history of the war—the one of which Fox, in his "Regimental Losses," says: "But the hardest fighting and greatest loss of life occurred in the first division of the second corps—Hancock's old division—in which more men were killed and wounded than in any other division in the Union army, east or west. Its losses aggregated 2,287 killed, 11,424 wounded (including the mortally wounded), and 4,633 missing; total, 18,344. . . . Over 14,000 men were killed or wounded in in this division during the war; yet, it never mustered 8,000 muskets, and often could muster only half of that. After the charge on Marye's Heights it numbered only 2,800."

At Marye's Heights Miles fell at the head of his regiment, (the Sixty-first Maryland,) with a severe, and as was then supposed, a mortal wound, but recovered to fight many a battle later.

Serving in all the campaigns of that grand fighting division from the Peninsular campaign to the last ditch at Appomattox, it seems curious to be told now "that his hardest fighting has been done since the war.

He possessed that military genius which West Point cannot supply, and perhaps his self carried fame would not shine so brightly had he passed through that school, instead of graduating on the field of battle. He divides with Logan, how equally or surpassingly history will say, the honors as the beau ideal of the volunteer soldier of America. I know from experience the stuff of which he is made, and will venture the assertion that the command of the armies of the United States has devolved upon no worthier or more competent officer than the "volunteer" who will succeed to that high position if he lives until September next.

DESTRUCTIVE CYCLONE.

Little Rock Almost Wiped Out of Existence.

The State Insane Asylum and Penitentiary Badly Damaged and Scores of the Inmates Injured.

LITTLE ROCK, Ark., Oct 3.—A terrible cyclone swept over the business portion of this city at 7:30 o'clock last night, carrying death and destruction in its path.

The first intimation of the impending catastrophe was when the cyclone struck. All lights were extinguished and the dark streets were filled with flying roofs, walls and debris of all kinds. It swept up from the southwest, striking the city near the insane asylum, the main part of which was demolished. Dr. Ingate was killed and several inmates seriously injured.

It then passed on to the penitentiary doing but slight damage at intermediate points. The second and third stories of the shop building were blown off, the cells being uncroofed, the shop destroyed and the old building scattered broadcast. A convict was killed and several guards injured. The terrible work continued to the main part of the city and its path was strown with debris of wrecked buildings, tangled telegraph and telephone wires and fallen trees that had withstood the tempests of many decades.

A number of residences were more or less damaged, roofs blown away and walls partly demolished The next marked damage was when the storm struck the St Mary's building at the corner of Spring and second streets. This was a large three story brick office and apartment house occupied by Larkins, a Methodist minister, and several lawyers' offices. Governor Hinbaek and General Armstead have rooms in this building, but they escaped injury. The colored porter was seriously injured.

Some of the most substantial brick structures of the district lying along Main and Markham streets, south to Fourth and Fifth, were razed to the ground. The wind was followed by a drenching tempest of rain lasting for nearly an hour and keeping nearly every one within doors, so that the real extent of the damage could not be ascertained at the time. Telephone wires in the business portion were all down and communication by that means was impossible.

The rumor of widespread fatalities caused intense solicitude for business men who were in the city, but who could not be reached by telephone. Street car traffic was notice suspended and the only way to reach their homes was to, walk. The police were on the scene promptly with an increased force and everything was done to restrain the disorderly element from creating a disturbance. The saloons, or those that were not entirely destroyed, were ordered closed at midnight by Chief McMahon The patrol wagon was pressed in service and many of the injured were taken to hotels where their wounds were attended to.

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., Oct. 3.—The cyclone which did so much damage at Little Rock, passed a few miles north of this city. Reports from the section say considerable damage was done to farm property, wrecking buildings and fences and injuring crops.

ONCE A DANCE GIRL.

Now She is Heiress to an Immense Fortune.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3—The death of Frederick Ryan, a capitalist, in the railroad accident near Yonkers, N. Y., a few days ago, has made Mabel Ryan-Edwards heiress to a large fortune. Two years ago Mabel lived with her father, the capitalist, at Pittsburg, Pa. She became stage struck and eloped with Clarence Edwards, a mere boy, Mabel was then only sixteen. The pair went to Chicago, Mabel performing in an "illusion" and "living pictures" at the world's fair. Then they came to California and Mabel worked at the midwinter fair as a hum girl and as the aerial lady who floats through space in an illusion. Edwards managed his wife's finances. She subsequently performed in several dance halls in this city and a few weeks ago left with her husband for Portland, Oregon.

"CHASTISE CHINA."

That is the War Cry of the Japanese Soldiers.

Only Supine Moral Chinese to Defend Pekin against the Onrushing Japs.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 3—Officials of the Japanese legation have received an interesting budget of news and gossip from the last mail from Japan. The spirit of the people is shown in war songs sung by the Japanese troops as they pass toward Pekin. The songs were officially compiled by order of Prince Arisugawa They breathe great bitterness against China, and significantly declare that "now is the time to plant the flag of the Rising Sun on the walls of Pekin and to illuminate its darkness." Each verse of the song begins and ends with, "Strike and Chastise China." The various verses describe the Chinese as arrogant and insolent with an "army of cowards." Of the Chinese troops the war song says: "They are an undisciplined rabble, and however fine their arms look, they are useless like the bolles in pictures" The chant closes with an invocation to "March and fire as long as breath remains."

The Japanese minister of finance has officially made known that the war will not be allowed to interrupt the internal improvements of Japan Consequently, railway construction is to proceed with the same vigor as in peaceful times. The minister has arranged that the treasury shall keep separate accounts of the war expenses and those for internal improvement, in order that the former may not overshadow the latter. The latest customs house reports issued in Japan show that her trade with the United States is greater than that with any other country. The total trade last year was about four million yens. The British trade, which comes second, is three and a half million yens. The Japanese people and press are retorting to the Chinese emperor's proclamation directing that the Japanese "winojen," meaning pigmies, "should be driven to their lairs." The Chinese are being called "chau chau," the word signifying puerility. "Toupi Kuu," meaning pig tailed vagabonds, is also used.

China is referred to as "Mei-So-Kaku," meaning the country in which people cannot make up their minds. The Japanese theaters are already presenting plays showing the routes of the Chinese on land and sea.

SHANGHAI, Oct. 3.—French troops are massing in Tonquin. It is reported that the Japanese have captured Liu Lien Chen, on the eastern side of the Yalu river. One hundred and fifty thousand men have gathered at Pekin for the defense of the city, but of this number only 70,000 are effectively armed. Only 50,000 soldiers are available for the defense of the province of Ohi Li Kuan, and these are raw recruits. A Japanese army has landed north of the Yellow river, in the southern part of the gulf of Pe Chil Li, to intercept the transportation of troops from the south by way of the Grand canal to Tien Tsin. A Japan fleet of seventeen ships is now blockading the gulf of Pe-Chil-Li.

GETTING THE ARMY AND NAVY READY

LONDON, Oct. 3.—The secretary of state for foreign affairs, the Earl of Kimberly, has been in communication with the Indian government and preparations are being made to concentrate English and Indian troops in readiness to proceed further east. It is added that the sanction of the cabinet is necessary before any further steps are possible. A dispatch received here from Portsmouth says that rumors are circulated there in regard to extensive naval preparations. The various heads of departments at the dock yards had a conference this morning, at which the opinion of the officers was taken in regard to the time the first division of the reserve ships could be in readiness to put to sea. The dispatch adds that the training squadron's departure for the West Indies has been postponed from Saturday next to Wednesday a week, and, if necessary, the cruise of this squadron will be abandoned and the men on board training ships will be transferred to ships which will shortly be commissioned.

LOST HIS WIFE,

And With Her His Money and His Property.

A Capitalist's Wife Deserts Him and Elopes With a Street Car Conductor.

SAN FRANCISCO, Oct. 3.—Charles Stelling, grocer and capitalist, is out $5,000 in cash, all his deeds to property valued at $60,000 and a pretty wife, who has deserted him for a street car conductor. Bonds, papers and everything pocketable have disappeared from the Stelling residence.

Stelling is eccentric, and one day confided to his wife that he had stored away in a convenient chest a bag of gold for an emergency. This emergency came when Mrs. Stelling decided to elope with Alexander McNeill, a street car conductor.

Besides owning three groceries and a coal yard, Stelling possessed much valuable business and residence property, all of which he placed in his wife's name soon after his marriage. The deeds to the property, with certificates of corporation and mining stock and the bag of gold have gone with the eloping couple. Stelling is at a loss how to recover any of his property.

THE BICYCLE CAR.

A Curious Invention Made by a Fort Wayne Citizen.

John R. Mote, of Lakeside, Who Is Something of a Genius, Talks to a Sentinel Scribe.

Fort Wayne can boast a genius who is responsible for a hundred inventions. There are few cities that can make this boast. Furthermore, it is likely that half the people of Fort Wayne never saw or heard of this inventor. So much for not keeping one's ears and eyes open

As the sojourner on a suburban car goes east over the Lakeside line he will notice, at the extremity of Columbia avenue, a queer looking building located on the right, by the barn terminal.

The building is a curiosity. It might be an improvised steam boat or built by hands which had once helped to fashion ships. Thereon is a sign which reads:

I LEARN YOU TO TAKE PICTURES FOR $5.

But photography is not the one thing which distinguishes John R Mote, the owner, designer and builder of this odd structure. He is the man of the hundred inventions and it was to see his latest—the only real, genuine bicycle car—that took a Sentinel representative to Lakeside last evening. Mr. Mote was in his workshop and sociably inclined.

"Yes, I am something of an inventor," said he; "photography is only a side issue I have spent considerable time on my bicycle car and am now only waiting for a manufacturer to take charge of placing it on the market."

The invention was then taken out and tested before the astonished scribe, who was not expecting so curious a piece of mechanism It consists of three bicycle wheels arranged something after the manner of a tricycle and supporting a light wooden frame or car. The seat is a bicycle saddle placed over the rear and center wheel This wheel, which once served as the motive power for a Star bicycle, is provided with ratchets and operated as in a bicycle of that pattern. The frame, or car, is built about the two front wheels, and, although in its present state the machine looks rather clumsy, yet if built of light wire its weight ought not to exceed that of an ordinary tricycle, which it strongly resembles. The concern is also arranged so that it can be hitched to a horse or team, and is chiefly designed for road service and is suitable for any one loading an itinerant life.

Mr. Mote, although he has successfully wrestled with 100 new mechanical ideas, met with no little discouragement when he first attempted to operate the car. It insisted on running backwards instead of forwards. For instance Mr. Mote planned a trip to Hicksville and mounted his wheel. In the twinkling of an eye, almost, he found himself in the suburbs of Columbia City. This slight difficulty was overcome and then the brake got out of gear. In going down a steep hill the redoubtable Mote applied the brake. It would not work. Horrible apprehensions seized him and to stop the machine he shaved his leg through one of the wheels. The thing jumped twenty feet in the air and fell back on Mote with a dull, sickening thud.

He was unhurt, however, and as these pleasant little episodes are the historic portion of a true inventor's life, he did not even grumble. The wheel is all right now and most any fine day Mote can be seen riding his wheel about the streets of Lakeside and looking for other mechanical nuts to crack.

Chapters might be written on Mr. Mote's inventions They range from farm fences to gas lamps and from hickory-nut shellers to patent cow milkers He has grown rich from their sale and owns several fine houses and lots.

The inventor was born in England and has traveled largely in this and foreign lands. He is a self made man and also something of a poet. A trip to his home will convince the most skeptical In fact

Mr. Mote's Latest,
And he invented—what one?

AN OHIO VISITOR.

A Former Resident of This City Visits Historic Points.

J. C. Wallace, esq., wife and sister, Mrs Dyche, of Springfield, Ohio, are guests of General Secretary J. W. Barns, of the railroad department Y. M. C. A. Mr. Wallace, having frequently visited Fort Wayne prior to 1845, when the "Old Fort" was one of the principal attractions, was anxious to see the "old block house" once more, and proceeded to the site, but found no vestige remaining. He was pleased, however, with the manner in which the historical spot is being cared for. The cannon captured from the British by Commodore Perry on Lake Erie, and brought here by General Anthony Wayne is now doing the somewhat unique service of hitching post at the residence of ex-Mayor Randall corner Berry and Lafayette streets and was shown the gentleman, who while tossing his eyes upon the old relic remarked: "This is too valuable a piece of property to belong to any individual or to be used for such a purpose. It should be in the possession of some historical society that would preserve it for the benefit of future generations." He further observed: "The great transformation of the Indian hunting grounds into a city of such importance and magnificent proportions is truly marvelous in my eyes."

CONTESTING A WILL.

Involving Between $25,000 and $30,000 Worth of Property.

The Eldest Daughter Seeks in Court to Break the Will Made by the Late Mrs. August H. Carier.

A big will case, involving property to the amount of $25,000 or $30,000, and one which will develop considerable interest, is not down for hearing before Special Judge John Morris and a jury in the circuit court next Tuesday, and its trial will no doubt occupy all the remainder of the week

The case is that of Mrs. Juliet Lingfelser against the Misses Clemens Carier and Helen Carier, children of the late August C. Carier and his wife, Clemens H. Carier, and in it the plaintiff will seek to set aside the will made by the latter, Mrs. Carier, by which she gave at death all her property, real and personal, to her two daughters, Clemens and Helen Carier, some of the facts which will be developed at the trial being substantially as follows:

In the spring of 1891 August H. Carier, of this city, died, and within a few months afterward his wife, Mrs. Clemens Carier, also departed this life, holding at the time of her death the title to valuable real estate, on two lots of which the family residence, 161 East Berry street, was situated, and she also became the possessor of considerable estate through the payment of a life insurance policy which Mr. Carier had carried in her name for the sum of $10,000, the whole estate which she left being valued at between $25,000 or $30,000.

Before the death of Mrs. Carier she made a will giving all this insurance money and the valuable real estate of which she was possessed to her two unmarried daughters, Misses Clemens and Helen Carier. By this suit her other and eldest daughter, Mrs Juliet Lingfelser, seeks to set aside the will, claiming that in the making of it she did so because of the undue influence exerted over her by the two other daughters, Clemens and Helen Carier.

It seems that the testatrix, Mrs. Carier, who was a lady of advanced years and in feeble health, had become exceedingly nervous, disturbed in mind and overwhelmed with grief by reason of the loss of her husband only a short time before, and that this had so impaired her mental faculties as to render her more easily to be influenced by others, and it is claimed by the plaintiff that the daughter, Clemens, availed herself of the opportunity afforded her, by reason of her association with her mother, in the absence of her sister, Mrs. Lingfelser, and by her representations and charges against said sister, to prejudice and embitter the mother against the plaintiff, and that she followed this up by causing her mother to exclude Mrs. Lingfelser from anything more than a mere nominal provision in the will by the making of only a trifling bequest to her.

These alleged facts, which the plaintiff will endeavor to prove, are, of course, denied by the defendants, who assert that there was no unfair influence exerted over the mother by either of them and that it was not attempted by them to influence or prejudice their mother against Mrs. Lingfelser and they will also contend that Mrs. Carier was in the possession of her unimpaired faculties and fully competent to make the will that she did.

When the case came up in the circuit court some days ago before Judge O'Rourke the defendant's attorneys filed an affidavit for a change of venue and Judge O'Rourke appointed John Morris, sr., as the special judge to sit on the bench during its trial. Judge Robert Lowry appears as the attorney for the plaintiff and Judge Allen Zollars and Judge W. G. Colerick as the attorneys for the defendants

OCTOBER WEATHER,

As Predicted by Rev. Ira Hicks, the Prognosticator.

Rev. Ira Hicks, the weather prophet gives out the following as the weather predictions for October: "October begins bright and cool, growing warmer in west, with secondary storms crossing the country from 2d to 4th. Frosty nights will follow. Another warm storm wave will start from west about the 5th, bringing rain along its path to the east during 6th to 10th. Cold and frost will attend, clearing conditions following. The 13th and 14th are reactionary storm dates, with full moon 14th. Cold and frosty weather will follow storm flurries about these dates. The 18th to 21st is a storm period affected by both Venus and Mercury. Storms on lakes and seas will be dangerous This is especially true of the reactionary storm on touching the 20th and 21st. Venus on the 21st, Mercury on the 26th, new moon 28th, and Vulcan 30th, compose a combination that renders the closing day of the month precarious on land and sea. Rain, turning to sleet and snow, attended by dangerous gales on the lakes. Cold and freezing follow."

COMPLAINT comes from some quarters against the employment by the city of private detectives. The people who do the complaining are the ones who desire to break the law. Other cities have private detectives and if we had a few more it might be better. Give us enough of them to secure the enforcement of all the laws.

THE winter club season, as was noted in the society columns of THE SENTINEL of last Saturday, has begun, some of these social organizations holding their "openings" this week and inaugurating the work for the winter. That these literary clubs, where the mind is developed by the study of literature, science, art and history, are productive of great good no one can doubt. Giving due time for books, and what are classified as amusements, and for social duties, there is room and place for the literary club, and may they live long and prosper. They do a grand work and are educators for every one who is a member of any of them.

THE board of public safety has adopted solidity as one of the necessary qualifications of the employes of the different departments under their control, and whenever they find a man who thinks more of his own appetite for liquor than he does of his work they quietly let him go. This is right and the best people of Fort Wayne are with them. Intemperate men are not needed in any occupation in life, and corporations and business firms are rapidly raising the ban against them. We hope the board of public safety will continue this good work on all lines. Their reform measures have already worked a great benefit to our city and a continuance of it will meet with general approval.

THIS is the autumn of the year, and the born of plenty has been opened to scatter its treasures far and wide. It is nature's carnival, for then the fruits and the grain are gathered and the products of the tree and the vine are placed in storehouses for the winter's use. And then how beautiful are the autumn weeks. The spring with tender verdure, the summer with its passionate effervescence are quite eclipsed by the vivid splendor of autumn, which redeems the promise of both the spring and the summer, and which is the full consummation of all the pledges of the younger year. The autumn combines the adultary of beauty and of utility. It is radiant with all that delights the eye and it abounds with everything which satisfies the hope and brings a reward for toil. It is lovely with that indefinable grace which heralds the process of decay, and it is opulent in all of the evidences of nature's vitality and generosity. It is effulgent with a hectic beauty which speaks of death, and it is riotous with a joy of existence which is not clouded by the approach of early dissolution. It is the carnival of the "ripened year."

OUR democratic contemporaries are making prodigious efforts to create the impression that the people are exceedingly prosperous, that manufactories are running full handed, and that workmen are all employed at remunerative wages. All this is given as the result of democratic policy. Perhaps the Fort Wayne SENTINEL takes up the subject and makes the assertion.—Gazette

THE SENTINEL and its reporters to the factories in this city and published just what the proprietors or managers told them in regard to their business. They all, with but few exceptions, reported business as reviving in their different lines and were very much encouraged by the general outlook. They are employing more men than they have for many months and many of the factories are running ten hours a day, and in some cases longer hours of work are in force. The Pennsylvania company's shops, which is a sort of barometer of the conditions of the industrial business of our city, are running all of their departments ten hours a day and are paying the same wages they have paid for years. They report things very prosperous and look for a bright winter. It might be a good thing for the Gazette to send their reporters around to these different factories as THE SENTINEL did, and find out for themselves that good times have really come to Fort Wayne. We know that there are many men out of employment in our city at the present time, but most of them are Gazette who lost their positions during the strike, and these places in many cases have been filled by outsiders. We believe that good times have come to stay, and that in a few months our city will have its old time prosperity in every branch of business.

A Temperance Victory in the South.

The temperance party strengthened its hold on Arkansas at the recent election in that state, voting down license by a majority of 1,932 in a total of 97,-275, the count standing 19,591 against and 17,662 for. Local option sentiment is in the ascendency in most other southern states, as well as in Arkansas, and so overwhelming is the majority on that side that actual prohibition is enforced in nearly every county in some states. In Mississippi, for instance, the sale of liquor is permitted in only six counties.

The rural districts are especially uncompromising in their opposition to the liquor traffic, the planters and employing classes generally taking the lead in temperance matters, doing everything in their power to educate and control popular sentiment. The negroes are, as a rule, friendly to the interests of the liquor men, but the colored vote in the south has ceased to be a factor of first importance. Only a small percentage of the negroes vote. The black man have become indifferent and rarely exert themselves to the exercise of the elective franchise conferred on them by constitutional amendment. Hence the intelligent white element is in undisputed control of local legislation.

The south has been a stronghold of temperance since the close of the war. It became so from force of circumstances. Conditions compelled the people during the long period of reconstruction (not political, but material reconstruction) to practice rigid economy at every point. The luxury of whisky drinking was one of the first things to be lopped off. The habit of temperance once contracted became second nature, and then by natural process of evolution a solidly grounded principle.

Liquor drinking to excess in the south is rare. In the country it is held to be disgraceful, and even in the larger communities the practice is in rank disfavor. Public and private sentiment in the south is educated to a keen distaste for liquor drinking and all that pertains thereto. Therein lies the secret of the strength of temperance movements in most southern states.

And for that matter, without such an awakened public conscience any and all temperance movements will meet with most indifferent and unsatisfactory progress.

She Knows How to Fight.

Mary F. Sallade is a woman in New York city who has made considerable money in business through inventions of her own. She bought a home on Twenty-fourth street, but found the neighborhood so disreputable that she was not willing to bring up her little daughter there. Then she began an onslaught to clean out the block. She naturally antagonized other property owners and residents on her square, and they began to fight her. They raked over the ashes of her dead past in hopes to find something buried there which would redound to her discredit. They named various individuals with whom she had been involved in legal rascles.

But Mary Sallade had had two husbands and feamily warned her enemies that she had learned how to fight. She wrote a newspaper letter describing her life history minutely and spreading out this with her own fair hands the ashes in which they had hoped to make a find. She laughed them to scorn in a column which shows she could have made her fortune as a war correspondent in border days than those piping times of peace. Then she "paws" back at her opponents:

If Jake Schieler, who keeps the Arlington across the way, thinks he can terrify me by defaming my character, I assure him he will be the sorry of my troubles ends. Benny Edward always has to make a mess of it. He is not to blame for his father's meanness, but he has as much as a woman's right to that big coat as I could think him capable. Every one such knows that Jake's wife has a wrapper over dress fashion. They bought them to them, but I have the last laugh.

Shame on Jake and the Bickers women for their cowardly conduct. Instead of helping me in the hour of trouble, they would be the first to throw stones at me. If Jake Schieler thinks that it will pay him to assail the character of a woman like me, let him go ahead.

And he will be sorry for it.

Wheat Fed Beef and Pork.

The farmers of this country will learn one great lesson from the peculiar condition of the grain market. Never before in our history was wheat cheaper than corn. The drought and failure of the corn crop in many parts of the land will make corn continue to be high priced. The result has been in many places that farmers are feeding wheat to their live stock in lieu of corn. They have found that it is even a better feed for the animals. Corn fattens without making a large growth of muscle and bone. Hogs fed on corn exclusively, while very fat, are weak in bone and small in frame. The best pork and beef have been found to come from animals fed on wheat. The flavor is superior to that of corn fed meat. A mixture of the two grains together would probably make the ideal feed. One thing is certain, and so far as to say he believes the present depression in price is a real godsend to the farmer, since it will teach them the feeding value of wheat. He has known of this owner's being sold and shipped abroad at such low prices that it would have paid far better if fed to the live stock.

The verdict is generally in favor of wheat fed meat. Perhaps our surplus wheat can be traffic by always used in the way, and that the pig need never be a glut of this grain means. Probably every before the population grows up to overtake our western wheat fields there will be many article little to export.

It is certain we will have "wheat fed pork" in it more in the Dakotas, then millions of acres of land can be cultivated for a full crop every year, and millions of thrifty and industrious people will be made happy in the northwest. The result of an experiment in feeding wheat will in the likely rich Dakota lands prove a source of immense importance. It is a big proposition. If this will be true, it will be even in the interest with the farmers, and help to the west of farm operation is pulled out to the domain for settlement.

LATE FALL FASHIONS.

STYLISH APPEARANCE OF THE NEW SCOTCH CAMERON CAPS.

Sensible, Inshort Jackets and Long Coats. New Dress Goods and Fall Costumes. Hats and Bonnets Trading Heads for Men, Ties, Collars and Shirts.

(Copyright, 1891, by Press Publishing Co.)

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—Perhaps there is nothing new presented this season that is so clear or more other than the Scotch or tam o'shanter, with their woolly outside and roomy plaid lining. These plaids are the regular clan plaids used when the kilted legions marched down the misty defiles of the land of cultured accompaniment "frolicky." The MacGregors, the Campbells and the Cameron ons and I know not how many others would have the Scotch bright and by the night of the comfortable long capes over on every. They are fuzzy on the surface and warm rather than fine and sleek, but there is no gainsaying their stylish appearance. They are made to match the suit or not, as best pleases the wearer. There are winter stockings made in the same plaids, and ribbons also, and a few stuffed plaids for street skirts. These are shown in the green and blue plaids as well black—are 50 years ago. These are black capes, too, lined with plaid, or with a plaid silk hood, or with a black velvet capuchon. All the better fly capelets are gone where all discarded fashions go.

This season brings us a lot of short jackets made of black oxford cloth, line with red and navy beaver cloth, or a sort of astrakhan cloth. Some of these, however, are three quarter length. I should not forget the chinchilla cloth, which is simply astrakhan cloth in gray and white. The "ringer braid" is also used in these jackets with good effect, and often the ground to these is red or some bright color, with the latter shown by it, so that the under color shows very little, but still does show. There is a cape called the richelieu, which resembles the military very closely. Irish frize is seen in many long circular capes, also long coats, and incest to the long clusks of handsome hooded wools. Many of these are richly trimmed with fur.

There have arrived this week a few novelties, among them some Peking richesilk, which is absolutely indescribable, some crape varich and a pebbly surfaced wool goods called shevlotine. There is a greenish, leathery looking stuff suede, I should judge, of silk waste and wool, called frog's throat, and among the silks a floral silk brocade. Then there is heavy silk in Scotch plaid, some mirror moire in entirely new effects, some drap de venise looking as if it had fallen from some old painting, china armure and princess of silk. All these are made novel by weave, special treatment and coloring.

In woolen there is moria ng doriette, new unless the wide wale camel's hair and melton and whipcords, with a few new fancies worked out in Scotch checks.

These last are seen in mordore, gray and red in lovely tones. A red cheviot trimmed with velvet of a darker shade, and jetted galloon, with a velvet white point de venise, made a beautiful fall gown. A green gray cheviot, with striped overskirt trimmed with white vandyke point and with rush green accessories, made another beautiful costume. I have never seen cheviot in such rich colorings before nor its qualities so fine, as that is generally a material intended to give rather an appearance of warmth than coolness. The effect of the new twilled cheviot is much like camel's hair, with something of itself at the same time.

With one of these costumes is worn a round black felt hat turned up all around and with the top covered with handsome green tips. With the red gown there was a note of a toque, with an ibexian bow of red velvet and a black aigrette. I mention these to show that almost every costume requires a special hat or bonnet to bring the colors at least, if not some of the material. Regular tartans are often seen with a bit of the gown as trimming.

In there really any change in men's evening dress? If there is, I cannot tell what it is, but the swell tailor who gave me the picture says that the collar fares rear farther, lies flatter, and that the tails are in some manner curved to fit the figure better, and he said that collars are high, ties are wider and the front of the shirt may be embroidered, and the telescopic hat and the ribbon tie still dare quite the thing. If this is all the change the coming years bring to mankind, I do not know whether or to pity or congratulate them.

Gold Buttons For Babies.

The gold buttons for babies' frocks have been largely replaced by sets of tiny gold pins, united, as the buttons were, by slender gold chains. Every mother will appreciate the value of this change. Six buttonholes were needed for the stout sets, and if a little gown tightened or loosened there was no redistribution possible. The pins do away with worry and permit all sorts of lapping over or letting out.

HOW TO CLOTHE CHILDREN

A Problem That Makes Mothers Study.

A Minister's Wife Who Dresses Her Family to Excellent Fashion—How a Small Income Went a Long Way.

The puckers in many a mother's forehead are deepened as she studies how to dress her boys and girls in a respectable manner on the small amount that is available.

A minister's wife in a small town near Fort Wayne was confronted by this discouraging situation, but her woman's wit and a few ten cent packages of diamond dyes solved the problem and handsome clothes were soon evolved from a pile of odds and ends.

The Home Housekeeper, Ladies' Home Companion, and other household papers have published many articles telling how to use diamond dyes in making new clothes out of old. Pretty dresses, handsome cloaks, serviceable stockings, and gay hat ribbons and feathers are obtained at but little expense, not only for the children, but for the mothers as well.

The ease with which diamond dyes are used is really surprising. They make beautiful colors that never crock and are not fading. "While there are other package dyes, there are none so easily used, nor such fast colors," says Jean Hunt in a recent number of The Home. "I have tried other dyes, but the diamond color the most goods. Their fast stocking black is the only black dye for cotton I have ever found that makes a fast black which never turns gray when washed."

COSMOPOLITE DONAN.

He Hailed From South Dakota and "Still Keeps on Hailing."

[Special Correspondence.]

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—"I hail from Devil's Lake, S. D., and it's a good place to hail from so long as one keeps on hailing. I should not think of going back there to live. I was outlawed from two states soon after the close of the war, and I have outlawed myself from Dakota. In truth, I can't answer your question as to my residence, for I am a cosmopolite. I am somewhat like that young lady in the old story who, being asked what was her native place, replied 'I never had any. My father was an itinerant Methodist preacher.' I was born in Hinds county, Miss., but my present residence you will find in the directions on these letters."

The speaker was Colonel Peter Donan, commonly called Pat Donan, and it was in his room at the hotel. His table was well covered with letters addressed "Colonel P. Donan, United States," "Colonel Patrick Donan, New York," and so on.

Colonel Donan is tall, rather spare and nervous in manner and appearance, with very mild blueeyes, light hair, beginning to show gray, and a full beard, which is turning from light brown to a lighter shade. From crown to heel he is the typical thin, wiry southern blood.

"This wanlin life, of which much is said," he remarked, "resulted from a series of unforeseen events—in fact, I was kicked into it. I was down on my knees playing marbles in Paris, Mo., just like any other big boy, on the 5th of July, 1861, and on the 6th I was under fire in what they then called a battle. Indeed they had pictures of it in the illustrated papers and told of 'shoulder to shoulder' and 'front rank fell' and 'rear rank rushed to the front' and all that sort of thing, but that night I was in full retreat, a tropical battle, a tropical fast, long river and a sporting well. Open Rankspoke of him as a "Prisoner of letters whose words literary facts time upon the back of exporting grasscuppings, a poet without a people's passion and a literary photographer without the scent of chemicals." Before attaining his majority he was appointed by Archbishop Hughes as his secretary for Catholic papers, and he has since written for papers of every shade of politics, but always in his own normal style. In short, Colonel Donan is just what the tumultuous times of war and reconstruction would naturally make of an ardent, impulsive southern boy who had received a complete classical education at the age of 18 and was burning to emulate the heroes of antiquity.

feminine intellect has been considered within the province of man alone. The end of the century woman was nearly a few years ago, but today she is here, there and everywhere. A good type of her is Miss Marie Clark of Gilroy, Cal., a trip of a girl of 17 summers who can beat the swift quail on the wing as it breaks cover, pounds a lone rock finger and in this instance from a trap, shoot a running deer through the heart with her winchester rifle, whip any trout from mountain stream with her slender rod and reach it in the Californian vehicle with the endurance and pluck of an emigrant of 1849.

Despite these athletic achievements, however, Miss Clark is no headstrong, untutored Miss, no wild daughter of the Sierras, but a refined and cultivated woman, who can draw and paint as well as she can shoot and fish, and who is not only an honor scholar in the great school of nature, but in the high school curriculum of California as well.

Miss Clark is the daughter of Dr. J. Clark, naturalist, scientist and sportsman, and comes naturally by her great love for outdoor sports. Her hunting costume is simple, sensible and unconventional. Her outer clothing is of canvas, the skirt barely reaching to the knees. Under her regulation canvas hunting coat is a shirt waist of wool, and her feet and ankles are protected by Canadian hunting boots of light chun tanned leather, lacing to the knee and shaped at the foot like a moccasin.

When this California Diana abandons the chase for the quiet Walton brook, she wears light rubber boots that reach to her hips. During winter she is hunting trip recently Miss Marie shot a fine buck weighing 225 pounds, and had dressed the game so artistically as a veteran hunter. She has been an ardent disciple of Walton since she entered her teens and has been an expert with rifle and shotgun for two years past.

MYERS MUST SPEAK ALONE.

Candidate Owen Too Sick to Keep His Engagements to Speak.

The joint debate between Captain Myers and "Rev." W. D. Owen, the respective Democratic and Republican candidates for secretary of state, is off. The winner lands in the Republican party by a majority of 1,000. A joint debate on a foolish thing and reviewed with alarm is the certain humiliation that awaited their candidate. This prospect or something else made Mr. Owen very sick; so sick, in fact, that he went to a Michigan sanitarium. The other day Chairman Gowdy wrote Chairman Taggart positively refusing to carry out the programme arranged. Of course nothing was left for Chairman Taggart but to accept the declination. However, he made the suggestion and request that should Mr. Owen recover his health sufficiently to permit him to re-enter the canvass later on that the debate be carried out according to the programme originally laid out, either in whole or in part. Captain Myers stands ready at any moment to meet his opponent. Chairman Taggart will insist on the joint debate in the event that Mr. Owen once more enters the canvass. Captain Myers will keep the appointments as originally made.

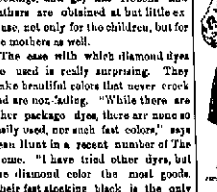
To Not Change Township.

Democrats cannot now move from one township to another without losing their votes.

CERTIFICATES OF NOMINATIONS.

The Chairman's First Duty Should Be to File Them.

"The importance of giving early attention to the matter of filing certificates of nominations cannot be overestimated," said Chairman Taggart. "Though it is a matter of vital interest to the party and the candidates themselves, I find it is one that is most often neglected. This is probably due more to procrastination than a failure to realize the importance of the matter. It should be the first duty of the county chairman to see that nominations are properly certified, that names are given with absolute correctness as to spelling, etc., and that all legal requirements are complied with. And candidates in their own interest should make it a point to be certain that their chairmen have performed their duty. I would request all chairmen and candidates to give this matter their earliest attention.



COLONEL PETER DONAN.

knowledged that he there learned the important lesson that the other fellow was likely to be as shy of him as he was of his other fellow. The papers told of a terrible charge and the ground reowned with dead and wounded, but there was no such thing. Lord, how the papers did lie in those days!

"It was that fall, in the retreat from Missouri, that I made my first big bluff. I went to headquarters that I was not ready for a private soldier and would not have any that I was going to get out of this armed mob and go to Virginia where they had some real war, and especially I was going to get somewhere with everybody would not look on me as a boy and call me Pete. There was no discipline, and every fellow came and went at will and begged, bought or stole his provisions, but I did want to keep in some sort of style. So one day I took my soon sashants and rambled up to pass for 21, though I was not quite 17. I went to north Missouri, rode right through Fremont's army and eastward into West Virginia, slipped through to the Confederates and got a commission. When I was by, I noticed I was the youngest colonel in the army."

The conversation here led the colonel into a lengthy discussion on the war as seen from the southern side, the blunders of reconstruction and the measures of some western politicians, and this last evidently aroused much animosity, for he grew highlied with an unusual fire and his language was singularly forcible. He says he has some of the finest compliments from Jefferson Davis to those from Andrew Johnson, and if he could but get them all together he would have a volume of which he might be proud.

As a newspaper writer Colonel Donan has been compared to a mountain torrent, a tropical hurricane, a rapid flowing river and a sporting well. Opie Read spoke of him as a "Prisoner of letters whose words literary facts time upon the back of exporting grasscuppings, a poet without a people's passion and a literary photographer without the scent of chemicals." Before attaining his majority he was appointed by Archbishop Hughes as his secretary for Catholic papers, and he has since written for papers of every shade of politics, but always in his own normal style. In short, Colonel Donan is just what the tumultuous times of war and reconstruction would naturally make of an ardent, impulsive southern boy who had received a complete classical education at the age of 18 and was burning to emulate the heroes of antiquity.

RAILWAYS AND SHOPS.

Fireman Day Dies From Injuries Received Sunday.

Conductor Rogers Held Up by a Tramp at Elida—Bad Wreck at Mansfield.

A. H. Day, the fireman who was injured in the Wabash wreck at Maumee last Sunday, died at the hospital in Toledo at 9:45 o'clock yesterday morning. He leaves a wife, but no children.

BALL BEARINGS A FAILURE

The experiment with ball bearings for wagons has not proved satisfactory. The tests has not come when it will pay. Professor Sweet, who made the experiments, says "it would be better to use the same money to put wide tires on the wheels and cut off the forward axles so as to bring the forward wheels the width of the tires nearer together than the hind ones. He writes: "I have just been over a dirt road where 100 tons of limestone are drawn every day, and the ruts were horrible when only common wagons were used. The road is now splendid, all owing to the use of half the number of wagons built as above described, while the ball bearings could at best reduce the power required to draw farm wagons only from 5 to 10 per cent. The wide tires and short axle wagons would reduce the cost of hauling on the farm roads 40 to 50 per cent, and the cost of the changing to ball bearings would equal the cost of the new wheels and front or back axles."

AN ENGINEER'S THRILLING STORY.

Engineer James Root, whose heroism saved 300 men, women and children from the forest fire which wiped out Hinckley, Minn., arrived in New York yesterday with his wife and son from his home near St. Paul. To a reporter he told the following story of the act which has made him famous: "I was making my run from Duluth to St Paul, when we ran into a smoke so dense that, although it was 3 o'clock in the afternoon, you could not see your hand before you. We went through about forty miles of this and was about three miles from Hinckley, when we got in clear daylight. About half a mile further on I saw people running toward me from all directions, most of them from Hinckley. I was forced to stop, and then they shouted: 'The town is being burned to cinders. For God sake save us.' I could see no fire, but all of a sudden, while three women were standing by the engine, the wind came with such a rush that it swept them clean away and nothing has been seen of them since. Then I told the people to jump in, and, as I was stepping up into my cab, everything seemed to be a ball of fire. It was as sudden as a flame bursting out in a lamp. I let go the throttle and started to back down to Skunk lake, about six miles away. We'd scarcely got moving before the train from beginning to end was a rolling ball of fire. I saw the thick pages in the cab bend with heat, then they burst their frames and leaped to the top of the cab where they were smashed, and the pieces gashed my head and throat. All I remembered then was dodging my head to avoid the flames, which came blowing in at the window, and I must have fainted, for I came to as the engine stopped and I saw that I had unconsciously shut off the steam. My hands then were so swelled with the heat that they looked as if I had boxing gloves on. The fireman came out of the water tank and shoveled more coal into the furnace, and all I remember after that is the fireman saying: 'We're done for the time, sure,' and I thought to myself, 'Yes, I guess it'll be over soon now.' When I came to I was in the slush and mud of Skunk lake."

BRIEF MENTION.

Supt. C. D. Law went to Chicago this morning.

Nickel Plate Conductor J. H. Frost is taking a lay off.

August Ebrald has resumed his old position in the electric light works.

Last Monday the Nickel Plate carried seventy car loads of grapes west bound through this city.

George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne works, is working again, having recovered from a week's illness.

There was a test of the Van Slack fire extinguisher at the Feeble Minded Institute at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

Brakeman M. L. Howden, G. B. Kinsle and F. H. Woolery have returned to their runs on the Nickel Plate after a lay off.

William Kruse, who had been on the sick list for a week or more, returned to his duties at the Anthony Wayne works today.

Thomas Griffin is again at work, after ten days' lay off on account of the injury he received by a fall on the street. He is employed in the electric light works.

Tomorrow is the day set for the democratic barbecue at Huntington. The Wabash is expecting to carry a big crowd and is making preparations accordingly.

Dr. Carr, of Ligonier, stopped off here a few hours this morning, en route home from California. He is an uncle to George Shisler, of the Anthony Wayne works.

William Runsman, who was forced to resign as fireman at Rhinesmith & Simonson's factory on account of ill health has resumed that position again, having recovered his health.

Harry Hays left yesterday for South River, N. J., where he will set up a 125 horse power Bass improved Corliss engine in the factory of the American Enamel Brick and Tile company.

F. H. Boestor was the successful bidder on the contract to erect the Hamilton library building. The contract price is a trifle above $2,200. Work on the building will be commenced at once.

William Yates, one of the Wabash engineers who lost his position through the strike, has started a bakery at 14 Michigan avenue. Mr. Yates ran an engine on the Wabash for twenty years.

Mort Tyger, shipping clerk for Charles Faulk & Company, has returned from a three days' bicycle tour. He visited Adrian, Mich., and all the intermediate points, traveling nearly 350 miles.

Wabash engine 46, which was ditched at Maumee Sunday, was brought here for repairs this morning. It is damaged to the extent of $700. The damage to the cars and track will probably amount to $3,000, making the wreck a pretty costly affair.

A New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio train ran into a freight on the Baltimore and Ohio road at Mansfield, Ohio, last night, causing a very bad wreck. The engineer and fireman of the former train were badly injured and fifteen cars were demolished.

While the papers are busy writing up Peter Rijnhart, it might interest the public to know that that person is no donut on his way to Portland, Ore. Last Monday he purchased a ticket at the Wabash depot in this city for Oregon and left on a train a few minutes later.

Missouri river roads announce that after October 20 all freight rates to Portland and adjacent points will advance from seven to twenty-five per cent. This is a discrimination in favor of San Francisco, though the object is a mystery. Local railway circles are much disturbed over the situation.

The Logansport Pharos says: "James McCrea, president; J. T. Brooks, vice president, and D. S. Gray, general agent of the Pennsylvania lines, arrived in the city this afternoon on Panhandle train No. 21. They will be joined this evening by the directors of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy road and the party will leave in the morning for an inspection of the Toledo, Peoria and Western. The two companies are preparing to operate the Toledo, Peoria and Western jointly between Effner and the Mississippi river."

Wabash shopmen who are off duty: C. G. Gissman, sick. H. C. Lehrman, gone to St. Louis to spend a week. E. A. Coleman, sprained hand. John Keese, sick. J. F. Carry sick, and J. F. Plank, sick. James Conroy, of the Blacksmith department, who has been sick for some time, has recovered and will resume work this week.

Frank Kirchner, formerly a Pauhandle train dispatcher, has invented a new rail which is said to be a novelty. He has great faith in the invention while others think it is impracticable. The principle of the rail is that the top of the rail where the wear comes can be renewed without disturbing the main rail, the rail being constructed in two pieces.

Luckily for railway conductors the average traveller keeps the seat in which he is first found. The conductor is by no means the infallible person that some folks think him, and only this habit of the traveling public enables him to keep track of newcomers. Every stranger who moves from one seat to another thus becomes an object of suspicion to the conductor, and is watched lest he be trying to ride free.

Last night the city marshal of Pierceton arrested two tramps whom he found in a box car on the Pittsburg road, on suspicion of being implicated in the murder of the tramp barber at Delphos a few days ago. Officer Stoll went down to Pierceton to investigate the case, but refused to take charge of the men, because he was convinced they were not the men wanted in Ohio. The tramps were armed and a charge of carrying concealed weapons was filed against them.

Conductor Rogers, of westbound Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago freight train No 75, was held up by a tramp at Elida Saturday night, about 9 o'clock. The train was standing on a switch and Mr. Rogers was going from the caboose to the engine, when the tramp stepped from between the cars and demanded his money. It happened that the conductor had his watch and money in his other clothes in the caboose, and the tramp was not successful in getting anything from him. Mr. Rogers was not armed and the tramp escaped.

Every year the Grand Rapids road runs two cheap excursions between Mackinaw and Richmond. One of these excursions is from the south and the other from the north. On the 11th of September the northbound excursion occurred and nearly 2000 people took advantage of the occasion to visit the northern resorts. Yesterday the southbound excursion, starting at Mackinaw, took place, and there were over 900 people in the party. About half of them went to Detroit and the balance came on to Indiana, about fifty of them stopping at this point.

John H Mitchell, for fifteen years bridge superintendent of the Wabash, and for the past four years in the same capacity on the Big Four, has received a handsome promotion to the general directory of the latter road at Cincinnati, as the master of the entire Big Four system. Mr. Mitchell is one of the best practical railroad men in the service, and his services have received proper recognition from the Big Four management. Mr. Mitchell's family will continue their residence in Lafayette for the present. When connected with the Wabash, Mr. Mitchell was a frequent visitor at Fort Wayne.

The Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company has filed in the United States court at Indianapolis a suit against the Fort Wayne Electric company, R. T. McDonald, president, alleging that the latter company is infringing on a patent right owned by the Westinghouse company. It is set out in the bill that A. B. Shuttenberger is the original inventor of a motor for alternating electric currents, and that the patent was assigned to the Westinghouse company in 1888. The Fort Wayne company, it is averred, has since 1892, been using the meter without right. The complainant demands an injunction against the Fort Wayne company and an accounting.

STATE NEWS.

Frunel Watkins, of Gibson county, died yesterday. He was seventy-nine years old, and the father of twenty-one children, fifteen of whom were by his bedside when he died.

A peculiar disease has broken out among the cows in the vicinity of Palmyra, in Harrison county, and two dozen and more have died. The local veterinarians are unable to diagnose the disease, and the state authorities have been notified.

A stranger, registering as Michael Harrington, of McKeesport, Pa., went to Princeton and deposited a draft for $1,800 on a McKeesport bank, after which he began buying merchandise right and left, giving checks in pay ment. The draft on McKeesport came back dishonored. Meanwhile Harrington had disappeared. The merchants lost little by his transactions, unless they looked Harrington money, as all the goods were reclaimed.

Elder Eugene Martin, of Bartholomew county, who is proselyting in the interests of the Christian church, pitched a gospel tent at Azalia, much against the staid old Quakers' wishes in that community. A site for the tent was found with difficulty, and there have been frequent threats to burn it down. Mr. Martin and his assistants have all been greatly annoyed by petty persecutions, of which the Friends disclaim knowledge. The inhabitants of Azalia are well to do farmers, but it is said that they are exceedingly jealous of their settlement that no church, save the Friends, has ever found a footing there.

ACTOR GOTTSCHALK.

CHARACTER SKETCH OF A CHARACTER PLAYER.

Born in London of Talented Parentage —Had a Love for the Stage from Childhood—Also an Accomplished Musician.

FERDINAND Gottschalk, the actor, was born in London, Eng., Feb. 24, 1865. His parents were lovers of art in all its branches, and from them he inherited an artistic temperament, which made him as a boy delight in musical pastime, and which eventually led him to the professional stage. His natural tastes were carefully cultivated by his parents, whose efforts in that direction were seconded by his own application to congenial tasks, and he soon became possessed of many accomplishments. He devoted some attention to literary work, and two plays stand to his credit among the products of his pen. He is a painter in both oil and water colors, and is not only a performer upon various musical instruments, but has displayed much merit as a composer and improvisatore. His first stage experience was acquired with the Hampstead dramatic society, an organization which he formed among his young associates when he was about 12 years of age, and several of the members of which have obtained prominence upon the stage in this society he played character parts and eccentric comedy, and during his several years' connection therewith he developed much skill and won considerable fame. The late Rosina Vokes, having often heard flattering mention of his powers, finally made him an offer to become a member of her company. This was in August, 1887, upon the eve of her return to this country after her annual vacation. He accepted the offer, and was en route for these shores within ten days. He made his first appearance on the professional stage in Toronto, Can., playing Paddles in "Which Is Which." He remained a member of this company until Miss Vokes retired from the stage, a retirement which but recently preceded the decease of that gifted actress and most estimable woman. Upon the occasion of her final appearance, which was made in Washington, D. C., Miss Vokes, having responded to the repeated calls which followed the final fall of the curtain, by signs intimated to Mr. Gottschalk, who was standing in the wings, her desire to have him share with her the call, and, when he hesitated to accept the silent invitation, she called him by name, and, taking his hand in view of the audience, testified her estimation of the value of the support he had rendered her for so many years. When Daniel Frohman decided to put upon the stage of the Lyceum theater A. W. Pinero's delightful comedy, "The Amazons," now running at that house, he selected Mr. Gottschalk for the eccentric comedy role of Tweenways, his impersonation of which is not only one of the most entertaining features of this charming performance, but ranks as one of the most skillful and carefully considered pieces of work ever seen upon this stage, famous as it is for great achievements. Mr. Gottschalk is enthusiastically in love with his chosen profession, delighting in its arduous labors and beckoning up small care in make up and in all the details which intelligent and conscientious study of his roles suggest as necessary to their faithful portrayal. While associated with Miss Vokes he created nearly thirty parts, all of which bore testimony to his versatility, and as at times played as many as three roles in one evening, differing radically from each other and in each of which he deftly concealed his identity. Mr. Gottschalk is now a member of the Lyceum company and gives promise of a successful career.

Presented with His Own Watch.

An amusing incident occurred in the final inning of the Minneapolis-Toledo game, says the Minneapolis Tribune, when Werden hit a ball a mile over the fence, and tallied three scores thereby. Some of the Minneapolis rooters had secured Werden's gold watch from the man that first substitute had returned it to, and it was passed out into the field and presented to him just as he took off his hat at the plate in response to the crowd's ovation. He bowed his acknowledgments with a flash of pride, and then discovered it was the watch presented to Schmidt Toledo in 1893 by admiring friends.

How an Inter-preting Domino Made Good Use of His Opportunities.

About the time that the telephone was removed from the cabs and policemen and one became to be a telephone in a new passenger. There is hardly always followed the policy of keeping the numbers as low as possible, so instead of giving the police station telephone any number the discontinued roadhouse numbers and simply numbered, and the call sergeant at once responded in the affirmative. sult the directory. He may remember the number. That's how it happened that the minister was called up at midnight just after his phone was put in.

"Yes," he answered, "this is 132."

Then to his amazement came an inquiry if he would go up as umpire for a little "mixup" that would be along about 2 in the morning. He said he couldn't do it. Then the man at the other end of the wire wanted to know if it was Billy Talking and what the something or other was the matter with the "plate." The minister explained as well as he could, and there was a sharp ring off.

When the minister learned of the trouble forced number he was not at all indignant. He said he believed it would be the means of his exciting many souls. Therefore when he was called to the phone by some friend a quarter of Billy's he took occasion to say that it's business no longer connected with the roadhouse, but with the patronage of the new church "come out and see us some time." In this world and "We have services morning and evening on Sunday, and I'll try to make you have a good time. Don't forget the name of the church. Drop in any Sunday."

"Yes, sah," replied the darky. "What's de odd horse, and name?" "Jes' a hoss, sah." "Why do you usually put the horses of visitors who come to see your master?" "Well, sah, it dey's Methodists or Baptists, we gen'rally puts 'em in de side horse, but if dey's Presbyterians we puts 'em in de new one." "Well, Sam, you can put me horse in the new horse. There were two cases in police court this morning, both drunks. One was that of Henry Vance, a soldier, who came from Milwaukee on a furlough. He was arrested last night by Officer Elliott. Vance is addicted to both opium and whisky, but he was an old soldier and no doubt contracted the habits in the army, and for that reason Mayor Oakley let the poor old man off. He promised to leave the city at once. Charles Jordon was a well dressed young man also arrested for drunkenness by Officer Elliott. He plead guilty and was sent over.

SOME NARROW ESCAPES.

Wind Blows Down a Heavy Fence on Calhoun Street.

A Lady Nearly Crushed by the Timbers—Street Car Takes a Wild Plunge—Others.

About 10 o'clock this morning several persons had narrow escapes from serious injury on Calhoun street in front of the Ess block.

Some time ago a high and very heavy board fence was erected in front of the room recently vacated by the C. O. D clothing store and which is to be soon occupied by the First National bank. The fence was erected for the purpose of keeping out idle spectators whom it was known would throng about to watch the decorators and Italian marble workers there employed

Bill posters had covered the fence with paper and it was therefore very tight. This morning a high wind was blowing from the west. Striking the front of the building, the strong current was forced down and against the inside of the fence. Finally the supports were weakened and a strong gust blew the heavy fence outward to the sidewalk with a great crash Several persons had just passed and one lady was directly in front of the fence. She barely escaped with her life as the timbers knocked some articles out of her hand and smashed them on the walk. A. L. Randall, the bicycle agent, was standing at the end of the fence talking to an acquaintance and was scared out of a year's growth. Had the accident happened at any other time many persons might have been seriously hurt.

JUMPED THE TRACK

Last evening, near the corner of Jackson and Jefferson streets, a car on the electric short line jumped the track and with a wild plunge ran to the curb and started across the sidewalk. One passenger was badly frightened and shaken up. The motorman was unhurt. The car was off over an hour.

FELL IN THE RIVER

On Sunday last a party of Fairmen with lady friends, chaperoned by Mr. and Mrs. P. Epsworth, went up the St. Joe river and spent a pleasant day, but ended it with an almost fatal accident. Two of the gentlemen members of the party fell into the river, and were with great difficulty rescued.

ARM BLOWN OFF.

This morning the young son of a farmer named Lamin, living northeast of this city, was out hunting squirrels. He had just killed one and laid his gun down on the ground. In picking it up the weapon was accidentally discharged and the entire load of shot penetrated his arm. Dr. Harrod was summoned and found it necessary to amputate the member. The lad suffered greatly. Lamin has a brother, David, who lives in this city.

LOST A HAND.

Henry Kuntz, a Nickel Plate freight brakeman, this morning, about 2 o'clock, had his left hand mashed while making a coupling. He was taken to Knox, where the hand was amputated. Kuntz was brought to this city on No. 4 this afternoon and taken to the hospital. He was a new man and went on the road in July.
